FIGHT FLAMES IN DENSE SMOKE AS CANAL ST. BUILDING BURNS

RUDY'S LIFE IN BALANCE

FIRE SWEEPS CANAL ST. BLOCK

2 SAVED BY MASKED FIREMEN AS EMPLOYES MAKE DASH FOR LIFE

Two men were rescued after one had been severely burned, employes fled for their lives, and damage estimated at $25,000 was caused by fire that swept through the three upper stories of the six-story brick building, Nos. 8-30 Canal street, West End, extending through to No. 29 Merrimac street, today.

Explosion of a pilot light on an enamel machine used for coating furniture, caused the fire.

Enshrouded by cloud of dense, acrid smoke, firemen working under the eye of Fire Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman and Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson were forced to wear gas masks.

Traffic through Haymarket square and adjoining streets was blocked, crowds packed every thoroughfare and ambulances stood ready to remove patients from the Haymarket Relief Hospital across the street from the fire.

Victor Dolorusso, 45 years old, employe of William Leavens & Co. Inc., furniture dealers, who lives at No 58 Vine street, Somerville, was rescued by R. F. Raffes, fellow employe, after being burned about the head and arms.

Harry Hayward, 56 years old Dorchester man, who has been with the Leavens company for 50 years, was assisted downstairs to the street, after being trapped in the smoke.

Numerous firemen were partially overcome from swallowing smoke, and one was said to have been taken to the City Hospital suffering from burns.

London Girls Guard Name of Rudy

London, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.)—While Rudolph Valentino lies critically ill in New York his name is being protected here by a band of admirers, known as the "Rudolph Valentino Guild."

Marcis Stanhope of the Guild has written a London newspaper protesting a statement that Valentino's second wife divorced him on grounds of desertion.

"At a time when Mr. Valentino is lying ill, it is only fair that his name should not be smirched by untrue scandal," said the letter.

It was signed by 32 admirers of Valentino, 24 of whom were unmarried girls.

24 HOURS TO DECIDE WHETHER MOVIES ARE TO SEE SHEIK AGAIN

New York, Aug. 18.—The next 24 hours will decide Rudolph Valentino's fate, giving him life or death. If he does not improve by tonight he will die within a week, physicians say.

The doctors say they have done all they can for him and that his fate rests on the automatic resistance of the human body against infection.

Valentino sipped some chicken broth today, the first nourishment he has taken since his operation.

The following official bulletin was issued:

"Mr. Valentino rested reasonably comfortable last night and showed improvement in his general condition today. Temperature 101, pulse 98, respiration 32.

"(Signed)

"Dr. Paul E. Durham.
"Dr. Harold D. Meeker.
"Dr. D. Randolph Manning."

The temperature of 101 was a drop of two degrees from late yesterday.

MESSAGES FROM POLA.

The famous, dark-haired "Sheik" was greatly cheered today when told that Pola Negri had called up three times from Los Angeles inquiring about his condition.

He is constantly receiving telegrams from other close friends in the movie colony at Hollywood.

Valentina received a cablegram today from Natacha Rambova, his second wife, from whom he is divorced. She is now in Paris. She expressed sorrow at learning he was ill, extended her love, if was announced, and said she was praying for his recovery.

Jean Acker, Valentino's first wife, previously had made inquiries regarding his condition and said she would try to see him before she leaves for Europe on Friday.

Others who sent messages of cheer to him included Charlie Chaplin, Marion Davies, Mary Pickford, Mae Marsh and Jack Pickford.

2 KILLED IN AIR CRASH

London, Aug. 18 (A.P.)—Two passengers were killed and eleven injured today when an air liner, proceeding from France to England, crashed to the ground between Ashford and Folkestone.

The plane hit the top of a barn and crashed into a haystack. It was completely wrecked.

The pilot and mechanic were seriously injured.

Eight American passengers were reported aboard the craft.

The American passengers, as listed by the French Air Union, were; Balletta Grant, Robert Hutchison, Stanley Haggard, Margaret Haggard, Robert Blanty, Nellie eck, Florence Stroh and Edna Tourn.

Their addresses are as yet unknown, nor is it known whether either of the two killed were Americans.

CALL FOUR FROM CITY HALL IN GRAFT PROBE

Summoning of four men from City Hall to the District Attorney's office, and the report that $10,000 changed hands between a favor seeking contractor and a city official, featured today's developments in District Attorney O'Brien's probe of alleged graft among city officials.

Secretary John C. L. Dowling of the Finance Commission, called to the District Attorney's office, was in conference with the probe leaders for more than an hour. This was also true of James A. Desmond, contract clerk in the city's Public Works Department.

Chairman Carr of the Finance Commission and City Auditor Carven also were called to the district attorney's office, but both are on vacation and will not be back in Boston until Monday next.

The report of the $10,000 "present" to a city official ran through City Hall and the court house like a ball of fire. The rumor goes on to say that when the contractor received no preference from the official to whom he had paid the money he demanded the return of the "gift," and the official, on the advice of counsel, returned the money.

Mgr. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien, who opened the probe into the vitals of city politics, was reluctant at this stage of the proceedings to discuss the alleged $10,000 payment.

The complainants, whose attack on those responsible for the awarding of contracts, inaugurated the investigation, are members of the same contracting firm, Frank B. McGrane and William H. P. King.

At City Hall it was stated today that McGrane, who launched a pamphlet entitled "Citizens' Digest," to give his complaint to the world, was considered a "foreign" contractor.

The term 'means that McGrane

FULLER STARTS PROBE OF BIG CATTLE FRAUD

Governor Fuller has directed an investigation of a State-wide conspiracy to defraud the Massachusetts and the Federal government in connection with the bovine tuberculosis ormosis.

Commissioner of Public Safety A. F. Foote, Dr. A. W. Gilbert, commissioner of agriculture, and representatives of the office of Attorney-General Jay R. Benton are working on the case.

According to information obtained, the system consists of buying plundered or tubercular cows at Brighton abbatoirs and other places, at a cost of $10 to $15 each, having them treated and reidentified, and then collecting a total of $50 reimbursement or $35 each from State and national funds.

The investigation is planned to extend through Middlesex, Worcester, Franklin, Hampshire, Hampden and other counties, and it is expected evidence will be submitted to grand juries.

Governor Fuller called in General Foote and Commissioner Gilbert Monday night, directing them to

SCREAMS HEARD FROM SCENE OF HALL MURDER

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 18.—H. J. McCabe, bridge tender, testified at the Hall-Mills murder hearing today that he was at his bridge about two miles south of the crabapple tree under which the bodies were found.

McCabe said he had heard three "sets" of screams about 11:30 on the night of the murders. It sounded like two women screaming. The first screams were those of a woman being injured and a woman terrified. Later, the screams seemed to die away into moans, McCabe testified.

The bridge tender said that he heard no shots fired. Cross-examina-

AVERT PANIC ON HOSPITAL SHIP

New York, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.)—A panic among 127 children and their mothers when the river steamer Helen J. Hullard, "floating hospital" of St. John's Guild, crashed, stern first, into the East 26th street pier in the East River today, cutting a great hole above the water-line, was averted by nurses and physicians.

The passengers marched down the gang plank a few minutes later singing "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here."

A strong ebb-tide was held responsible for the crash as the steamer was preparing to dock.

The current swung the boat swiftly toward the shore line and before the crew could act the stern had tore into the pier.

When the crash was first sensed by the children many of them grabbed their mothers in alarm, but physicians and nurses quickly averted any danger of a panic.

'NO FOREIGN BOSS FOR U. S.', KELLOGG WARNS

Plattsburgh, N. Y., Aug. 18 (I.N.S.)—A plain-spoken message to the World of America's disarmament policy was delivered here today by Secretary of State Kellogg.

"The United States, having great natural resources, might be deprived of any army or navy at all

COST OF FOOD IS CUT IN 44 CITIES

Washington, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Retail food prices for the month ending July 15 declined in 44 of the 51 cities for which government records are kept, the Labor Department's retail food price index for that period dropped almost 2 per cent, to 157.0, as compared with 159.7, June 15.

The figures, made public today, disclosed that 14 articles were cheaper during the month, potatoes leading the decline with an 18 per cent. drop.

Thirteen articles increased, a 2 per cent. advance in fresh eggs being the highest. Fifteen showed no change.

Think of Your Dollar
Gertrude Says, 'Come On'

"I HAVE YOU THOUGHT about your dollar?"

That question is asked by one of the ablest modern financiers, a young man who has made the old-fashioned money gentlemen sit up. He says:

"We pity France because the franc has fallen, but what about our own dollar, of which we are so proud?".

It isn't a dollar compared with what it was fifteen years ago. It is THIRTY CENTS.

When people say the cost of living has gone up terrifically they really mean that the value of the dollar has gone down.

Men that tie up real estate on long leases are giving away their equity. What looks like a big rent today will be small ten years hence, the dollar will be worth less, the land will be worth more. Money has been going down steadily from the days of Queen Elizabeth, and before, until now A President of the United States once complained that you couldn't hire a good

CRISIS OF LIFE AND DEATH NEAR FOR VALENTINO IN HOSPITAL

BULLETINS ARE MORE FAVORABLE

York, telephoned to one of the nurses that she would go to the hospital this afternoon to see the stricken star.

The film starlet is growing restless in bed and is fretting about the duration of his confinement.

"How much longer is this darned thing going to last?" he asked today.

HAS THREE NURSES.

The telephone girls at the hospital were kept busy all morning answering inquiries concerning Valentino's condition.

Three nurses are in attendance for the sheik as all times, only one being admitted to his room at one time, this being done to prevent the patient from realizing his danger.

S. George Ullman, the actor's personal representative, said Valentino's fever had declined, and that he was "much better."

Shortly after 8 a. m. today a long distance telephone call from Los Angeles was received at the hospital.

"This is Pola Negri. How is Mr. Valentino?" a woman's voice queried.

When assured that there had been no change in his condition, the voice said, "Thank you," and the connection was broken.

Two similar calls were received during the late hours of Monday night and early yesterday.

A guard was placed before his door and even Joseph M. Schenck, who has insured the famous actor's life for $1,000,000 and who cut short his vacation at Poland Springs, Me., was denied admittance when he called with his wife, Norma Talmadge.

The hospital telephones were busy with inquiries from admirers, mostly women.

One girl took a monkey to the hospital "to amuse Rudy" and another took a poem.

SUSPECT CITY OFFICIAL GOT BIG GRAFT

came here from New York less than a year ago, established a $15,000 plant in Wollaston, and immediately sought city of Boston business.

His claim is that he was discriminated against by those in charge of the awarding of contracts in favor of larger contractors.

FOUR COUNCILLORS CALLED.

The fact that four city councillors were called before the district attorney in addition to Mayor Nichols and Atty. Charles H. Innes, gives basis for the belief that the $400,000 contract for snow removal last winter will play a large part in the investigation.

The councillors called are George Gilbody, Francis Farkman, Fred Dowling and John I. Fitzgerald.

These four voted against the awarding of the large contract, and the question was placed on the table for sixty days. At the end of this period the award was automatically passed over the heads of the opponents.

INVESTIGATORS AT WORK.

The district attorney said today his investigators were working on the investigation and his expected reports from them later today. Asked if these men were detectives, Mr. O'Brien smiled and said—"investigators."

He said he had not set a time to carry the inquiry to the Grand Jury, but added he could call that body together in 24 hours' time.

The probe concerns three municipal departments or contracts connected with these divisions—namely, street paving, fire apparatus and snow removal.

The investigation, preliminary to the Grand Jury action, concerns all these three.

FIRE APPARATUS PROBE.

The latest disclosure concerns fire apparatus.

Five or six weeks ago new contracts were placed for about twelve different types of motor apparatus. The appropriation was about $250,000.

Already the probe has disclosed the fact that the city's watch dog of the treasury, the Finance Commission, had studied the question of the latest loan order.

The Finance Commission ordered Corporation Counsel Frank Deland to determine whether the procedure by which the order was automatically passed after it had lain on the table for sixty days was strictly legal, and he reported that this was the truth of the matter.

Acting Mayor Charles G. Keene promptly passed the buck in the investigation to the district attorney, said he today: "Any further statement regarding the investigation of city affairs which the district attorney announced he has undertaken should properly come from the district attorney."

"I called on him at his request and gave him whatever information I possessed. I also expressed my readiness to give him any assistance I could in continuing his inquiry."

KELLOGG TELLS U. S. POLICY

If any such theory were applied," he said,

"I believe the only practicable basis is through dealing with military forces and visible, tangible armaments.

"NO FOREIGN BOSS"

"Certain powers have also urged the necessity of some sort of international supervision for carrying out any agreement.

"This government would not agree to placing any supervision of its armaments or the carrying out of any program in the hands of an international body."

PESSIMISTIC ABOUT RESULTS.

Kellogg's speech was delivered at the unveiling of a statue of Commodore Thomas McDonough, one of the heroes of the war of 1812, who defeated the British at Plattsburgh.

Kellogg paid high tribute to Commodore McDonough, and then, concerning American-British relations, said:

"It is inconceivable that anything can bring these nations again into conflict of war."

The American delegates will remain at Geneva so long as there is any chance of reaching an acceptable basis for reducing armament, Kellogg said, but it was obvious from the tenor of his speech that he was not sanguine of the conference attaining any far-reaching results, unless some of the European nations change their attitude.

The United States, he said, is not vitally interested in land armament other than that it would like to see Europe's armies reduced for Europe's own good. As for the American army it already has been cut to 118,000 men, about the minimum for police purposes.

It will not be practicable, he said, to arrange any universal scheme for reducing armies, "for it is difficult to see the relation of the land armaments of the Far East to those of Western Europe or to those of North and South America."

Warn Mothers of Fake Picture Contests

A warning against salesmen who are said to be victimizing mothers of small children by falsely representing a picture proposition, was issued today by the Boston Better Business Bureau.

Numerous complaints have been made by mothers who have been asked to purchase coupons at 50 cents, to enter their children in a picture contest. The salesmen represent themselves as agents of local studios.

MRS. MILLS CUT AFTER DEATH

tion elicited the information that McCabe had been treated for deafness on one occasion.

THROAT CUT AFTER DEATH.

That the throat of Mrs. Eleanor Mills, murdered chorister, was cut after her death from bullet wounds, was testified by Dr. A. F. Anderson, blood expert hired by the State.

Dr. Anderson declared that a week or so after the murders had been committed in 1922, he was given a quantity of soil to examine. This soil was taken from where the bodies of the murder victims were found.

The doctor said that analysis showed that the soil was impregnated with blood, thus establishing the theory that the murders were committed on the spot where the bodies were discovered.

"If a person's throat is cut after that person has been shot," said Anderson, "rapid bleeding ceases. Ordinarily a large quantity of blood would leave the body, perhaps six pints."

The doctor said that the soil examined revealed only eight-tenths of a pint of blood.

John I. Bowers, who succeeded Azariah Beekman as prosecutor of Somerset County, testified that Beekman had not turned over to him any records, exhibits or statements in connection with the Hall-Mills case.

Mrs. Grace Edwards, niece of former Prosecutor Edward Striker, Middlesex County, testified that Ray Ray Schneider and Pearl Balmer, who found the bodies, came to the Striker residence to report their discovery. Prosecutor Striker was not in, but Mrs. Edwards took the information and telephoned the police, she said.

HURRYING TO TRYST.

Mrs. Almeda Harkness, a comely and fashionably dressed young matron, testified that on the night of the murders she had encountered Mrs. Mills and the Rev. Edward Hall hurrying, separately, to the trysting place.

The witness said that she was out with her children, accompanied by a Mrs. J. Blust.

"I met Mrs. Mills going in the direction of Phillips farm about 7:30 in the evening," said Mrs. Harkness. "Half an hour later, I encountered Dr. Hall going in the same direction. They both appeared to be preoccupied."

"Did you speak to Mrs. Mills?"

"No, she merely smiled as she passed."

"Did you know her well enough to speak to?"

"Yes. We both sang in Dr. Hall's church choir."

"Did you speak to Dr. Hall?"

"No. He didn't speak to me."

"Did you notice that Mrs. Mills carried anything in her hand?"

"She apparently held something."

Prosecutor Simpson then produced a packet of love letters which were found at the scene of the murders.

"Was the package about this size?" he asked the witness.

"I should think it was about that size," replied Mrs. Harkness.

Later, Mrs. Harkness said she thought Mrs. Mills carried a small package but could not be certain.

The witness then said that she had visited the scene of the murders and there had found a blood-stained burlap bag. She notified the authorities of this find.

SHERIFF ON STAND.

Mrs. Blust was called and corroborated Mrs. Harkness' story.

Peter Tumulty, Hall household chauffeur, took the stand and said that he did not know whether the "big" car was in use on the night of the murders.

Roger T. Conklin, who was sheriff in 1922, when the murders were committed, then took the stand.

Diary Referring to Murder Found Near Washington

Washington, Aug. 18 (A.P.)—A dairy containing references to the Hall-Mills murder has been turned over to the Somerville, N. J., authorities by the Washington police. Apparently written by a woman, it was found recently in a pile of trash by a girl, whose name was withheld. In a nearby Maryland town.

Nicknames and given names were used in the sections relating to the murder, said the police, who received the book from the finder's mother. Time and fire, they added, had damaged it to some extent.

SUSPECT CARROLL FILES APPEAL IN "BATHTUB" SENTENCE

New York, Aug. 18 (A.P.)—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, today filed notice of appeal from his conviction of perjury under which he was fined $2,000 and sentenced to a Federal penitentiary term as a result of his testimony before a Grand Jury investigating his famous "bath-tub" party. The party was given on Washington's birthday on the stage of the Earl Carroll Theatre, when Joyce Hawley, a show girl, appeared in a tub of wine.

A HOME PAPER FOR THE PEOPLE WHO THINK

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1926

RICH WIDOW AND BOY HUSBAND WIN BLESSING

Parental forgiveness today brought happiness to William A. Fogwill, twenty-year-old Newton youth, and his bride, Mrs. Ida McVicar Fogwill, whose age is twice his own, and in their love-nest home in Crescent street, Newton, the June-and-December couple celebrated by giving the maid a holiday so they could enjoy housework together.

Industriously scrubbing the dishes, the young husband told of their married life and future plans, while his wife, wiping plates and silverware by his side, nodded her approval to all he said.

The wealth of Mrs. Fogwill, who was the widow of a prominent Newton builder, will enable them to take a European tour soon, and prior to that there will be a short honeymoon in the bride's camp in Maine.

But in the meantime she cooks delicacies for her mate and reads Shakespeare to him in the evening while he plays the accompaniment to their love song on his ukulele.

"I love to wait on Bill myself at meals and won't let the maid do it," said Mrs. Fogwill. "Now that his mother has given us her blessing and forgiveness our happiness is perfectly wonderful."

"Yes, we are glad mother consents to our marriage," chimed in Fogwill. "We don't care what the world thinks. There may be a difference in our ages but the giddy girls of today know nothing except good times and fancy clothes, and that's why I am content with Ida, who has a broad vision of life."

Upon their return from Europe, the couple will have work started on a new Colonial type dwelling in one of the fashionable districts of Newton.

Passengers in Wings of New Monoplane

London, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.).—Trans-Atlantic monoplanes, with wings so huge that they will house passengers and engines, are a probable development of the not too distant future, Louis Blériot predicted. Blériot believes that aerial transportation across the Atlantic will be an early development.

HIS CUT PRICES LED TO FIRE

Firemen found an inflammable liquid on the doorsteps of a burning dwelling at No. 23 Lexington street, East Boston, today, and according to thes tory of Philip Amico, one of the occupants, it was apparently placed there by some one angry at his operation ofa c ut price barber shop.

The fire damage was restricted to the doorway of the three-story wooden building.

While he was pouring the water on the steps, he said, somebody lurking in a doorway across the street hurled a brick in his direction and he escaped being hit by dodging quickly. He then sounded the fire alarm.

Amico's barber shop rates are 35 cents for a haircut and 15 cents for a shave and, according to his story, he has repeatedly refused demands of union barbers to advance his prices to the union scale. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Swett of East Boston owns the house.

CAR WRECKED AND DRIVER IS MISSING

Police were mystified today by the finding of a demolished automobile which had crashed through the fence on the Revere Beach parkway bridge over the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad tracks between Beachmont and Crescent Beach and plunged twenty-five feet to the tracks below.

The condition of the car, a total wreck, indicated that any occupant would surely have met with serious injurs, if not death, but nobody was found near the scene. The car was stolen from Philip J. Berson, Revere garage owner.

Police believe the driver leaped for his life just in time as the car took the plunge, or else it was deliberately steered into the fence.

Miss Frances Correnti and Frank Calabro, both of Pitts street, West End, aired a quarrel today in Municipal Court.

Frances was charged with assaulting Frank in an argument. Both told their tales of woe. Judge Murray placed the case against Frances on file.

"The only thing that I can recommend to you," said the court, "is to go home and say a prayer and when you get time read St. Francis of Assisi. St. Francis lived 700 years ago, but he did not live in vain. Read his sermon to the birds —devoted to peace, love and kindness.

"Learn a lesson today from St. Francis. Be proud of your heritage, my friends, for you come from one of the greatest races on earth."

SHE MADE BRIDE OF A DAY A PRISON WIDOW

REVEALS BABY SECRET

Claiming Cornelius Reardon of Dorchester is the father of her infant child, Miss Alice A. McChesney, above, young unwed mother of Roxbury, caused the law to take him away from his bride of a few hours. In court, where trial was postponed, she came face to face with his bride, Mrs. Anna McGrath Reardon, a Dorchester girl.

COURT DENIES SALEM EXTRA REPRESENTATIVE

A request for a writ of mandamus to compel the apportionment of two State representatives instead of one for a district in Salem, numbering 8,452 voters, was rejected today by Supreme Court Justice Henry K. Braley.

The case was allowed to go to the full bench of the Supreme Court later, at the request of counsel for the petitioner, Edward E. Merrill of Salem. The county commissioners specified that Ward 18 should be a single district in spite of its size, contending that any change would disrupt the apportionment.

SENATOR FERNALD HAS PASSED CRISIS

West Poland, Me., Aug. 18 (A.P.)—Marked improvement was shown today in the condition of Senator Bert M. Fernald, who has been ill from intestinal poisoning affecting his heart. "We believe that the crisis has passed," it was said at the senator's home today.

THIS JUNE-AND-DECEMBER COUPLE JUST AS HAPPY AS CAN BE ON THEIR DISH-WASHING HONEYMOON

SHAKESPEARE SAID A MOUTHFUL!

Parental blessing has completed the happiness of William A. Fogwill, 20-year-old Newton boy, and his rich wife, who is twice his age. Here they are in their cozy love-nest, enjoying the classics. Yes, all's well that ends well,

NOTHING'S TOO GOOD FOR BILL

"I love to wait on him myself—I won't let the maid do it," says the happy bride. And she does. The couple started on their honeymoon by giving the maid a day off. Looks like Bill might say: "Home had nothing on this!"

WIELDS A MEAN DISH RAG

Here is young Mr. Fogwill doing his bit around the family sink. He started his honeymoon washing dishes and he says he'll keep the good work up. Note the approving smile of his equally busy bride.

WHEN LOVE COMES A-TOOTING

Evening time is a happy time in the Fogwill home. While the youthful husband strums out love songs on his trusty uke his bride sits beside him and sings the refrains. Their ages may differ, but not their hearts.

TWO RESCUED AT FIRE

building are occupied by the Leavens Company, white goods jobbers, and Company, also furniture dealers. have the first three floors.

The blaze started in the finishing room of the Leavens Company on the fourth floor. It was discovered by John Bruni, a furniture surface at work on the fifth floor, who found the wood beneath his feet was getting hot.

Bruni investigated, locating a blaze near the stairway, and finding it had gained too much headway for a hand fire extinguisher, rushed to the street and turned in an alarm.

As it happens, the house of Hook and Ladder No. 1 is directly across Merrimac street from the burned building, so that this piece of apparatus was on hand within a few minutes.

ORDERS THIRD ALARM.

Chief Daniel Bennett arrived shortly, ordering a second alarm, and as the flames threw off choking black smoke, which filled the entire neighborhood, a third alarm was turned in.

One hundred and fifty employes of the Leavens Company, including twenty-five girls, made their way to the street as soon as the blaze was discovered, and they were followed by workers in adjoining buildings and the furniture establishment below.

Feeding on varnished furniture the flames worked their way up through the fifth and sixth stories, eventually breaking through the roof, while firemen struggled in the smoke with hose lines brought up through the building. Because of the dense smoke Chief Bennett ordered the high pressure companies shut down and the blaze was eventually brought under control by ordinary hose lines.

CROWD DRIVEN BACK.

Huge crowds attracted by the smoke, borne back and forth by the shifting wind, gathered in nearby streets, held back by mounted officers and patrolmen on foot. At one time when it was feared that the front walls of the building might collapse, the police drove the crowds far back and held them there.

Commissioner Hultman was on the scene early, displaying much interest in the manner in which the fight was handled. He was joined by Commissioner Wilson, both remaining until the blaze was under control.

At times the wind carried the smoke across Canal street and into the hospital, with the result that preparations were made to remove the patients to the City Hospital if conditions became worse. All the awnings on the canal street side of the hospital were taken down to obviate the danger of sparks setting them afire.

Tons of water were poured on the flames, and after all windows had been broken permitting ventilation, the firemen reached the seat of the blaze.

Following a conference between representatives of the public works department, the building commission and police, it was decided to rope off part of the street because of the weakness of the walls of the upper stories. A narrow strip was left open for north-bound traffic.

WOULD PAY FRENCH DEBT TO U. S. IN RUBBER RIGHTS

Paris, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—A proposal that the French debt to the United States be liquidated in part by profits from rubber growing in French possessions in the Far East has been put forward by M. Guirey, member of the Chamber of Deputies from Indo-China.

His plan is that an American financial group in given rights in 2 million hectares of rubber land and that a portion of the ensuing profit from the crop be applied on nation's debt. He would not have the land alienated from French control and would stipulate that French financiers be associated in the venture.

ORDERS CATTLE FRAUDS PROBED

attend a conference in Springfield, and emphasizing that above the movement to stamp out abuses, he wished to bring Massachusetts abreast of other States in the eradication of bovine tuberculosis.

Although at the State House it was considered the Bureau of Animal Industry was under fire, its titular head Dr. Howard was not touched. Dr. Harris W. Pierce, his assistant, denied a rumor that Dr. Richard M. Shaw, district veterinarian at Springfield, had been suspended.

On July 1 there was available for reimbursement of owners of condemned cattle $290000 from both State and Federal sources. It is understood this money has been literally poured out to hundreds of persons who have made a business of foisting diseased cattle on the inspectors.

One man whose real business is said to be that of florist in Springfield, is listed as having had direct reactions to the tuberculosis test among a herd in his name. Another farmer was found who, although his barn has room for only ten head of cattle, reported twenty-five reactions.

Rumors of frauds were said to have been current for some time in agricultural circles, and were reported to have been freely discussed at the recent Farm and Home week at Amherst.

As a result several farmer movements to bring about a better condition have crystallized. The Massachusetts farm bureau federation directors' meeting in Worcester tomorrow is expected to take up the question of having the farm bureaus lead a general movement to clear the State of bovine tuberculosis.

The first clue to the situation came recently from a visit of Dr. J. C. Mohler, head of the federal division of animal industry, to the Brighton stock yards.

Then the cows are brought to a place where they will be tested by officials, and slaughtered at Brighton as infected. After this a claim for $50 indemnity is put in, as an owner can collect up to $25 damages from the State for a grade cow and an equal sum from the Federal government.

He also collects salvage less loss. Agents of the Hampden County Improvement League co-operated in the investigation.

MALDEN MAN LEAPS FOR LIFE AS HOME BURNS

When John F. Dineen saw flames shooting from the windows of the home of Walter H. Preble at No. 82 North Milton street, Malden, today, he ran to the house, and pounded on the doors for several minutes.

He decided that all the Preble family were away on their vacation, and started to ring in the alarm, when he was amazed to see a figure leap from a window on the second floor.

It was Preble, who had been alone in the house, and had been awakened by the crackling of the flames. He was unhjured. The property damage from the fire started probably from crossed wires, was $1,500.

BRITISH ENVOY SAYS U. S. AIDS WORLD PEACE

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Belief that the United States is leading the world into a new era and a better way of life that ultimately will bring a "great spiritual rebirth," and thereby universal peace, was expressed today by Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to this country.

He was a speaker at the anniversary of the baptism of Virginia Dare, first white child born in the American colony.

Chief Tending Bar

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Dry agents arrested Frank Ryans, chief of the Lackawanna Fire Department, in a saloon. The agents reported they surprised the fire chief in the act of dispensing firewater over a bar.

man for less than $100 a year. You can't get a good laboring man now for less than $1,500 a year. It isn't that the man is worth more, but that the dollar is worth less.

VARIOUS ENGLISH newspapers criticize Gertrude Ederle's manner of swimming the Channel. They complain that she availed herself of the accompanying tug's protection and swam in the lee of the boat, which broke the force of the current. Being an American swimmer, she probably should have towed that tugboat with her teeth.

Yesterday Miss Ederle challenged anybody in Europe, man or woman, to a Channel swim for a purse of $20,000, and she is ready to swim now. That should clear up the atmosphere and open the road of opportunity for those who think Gertrude cannot swim.

METHODI POPOFF, Russian scientist, following in the path of Professor Loeb, shows that the eggs of sea urchins can be fertilized and caused to develop by pollen from plants grown in the sunshine.

That is an interesting experiment with the mystery of life, but it doesn't help to explain what life is. We know no more about that than our ancestor did one hundred thousand years ago. Herbert Spencer admitted it, after he had spent forty years studying, writing and explaining. We do not understand life, space or time, the only three things that we possess.

AN OXFORD PROFESSOR says the Prince of Wales went through the university without any examinations. "You couldn't examine a man who would be your King, you know," said the professor. "Besides, someone might be found better than His Highness, and that would be embarrassing."

THE PROFESSOR adds that the Prince was a conscientious student. He was a fortunate student also. Examinations are harmful, prove nothing, worry students, cause unnecessary strain and compel intensified study, which does no good in future years.

The ideal school and university will do away with examinations, being content to teach. It is the experience in life, later, that does the examining.

THE BOLSHEVIST government decides to solve its problems and get rid of its financial crisis by strict economy. Hundreds of millions of rubles saved in government expenses are to be invested in productive enterprises. Nothing more, it seems, can or will be squeezed out of the peasant.

Countries in Western Europe will discover after a while that they also must come to strict economy, especially economy in the gigantic cost of keeping ready for more war.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that the United States will not interfere in Mexican affairs, as it considers the Church and State troubles there part of the internal business of Mexico.

SAMUEL INSULL of Chicago sets a good example to husbands. He married a young woman, an actress of great talent. Her son is grown up and in business with his father. She doesn't want to sit with folded hands and watch the procession go by, wasting her talent. Her husband, wise man, leases a theatre, and Mrs. Insull will have her stock company and produce plays of merit. She will be IN BUSINESS in her line, as her husband is in business in his line, his being money and industry, hers art and culture. And they will both be happy. WISE Mr. Insull.

Break Window, Take Gems

New York, Aug. 18.—Two men stole diamonds valued at $6,000 from the jewelry store window of Robert Littleton, Brooklyn, and escaped. One man hurled a brick, wrapped in paper, through the plate glass show window and the other seized the tray of gems.

GARMENT SHOP OF 60 STRIKE

Sixty garment workers, the entire force of men and girls at the Matthews & Kadetsky shop, No. 35 Kneeland street, struck today at the call of Julius Hochman, vice-president of the International Garment Workers' Union.

Picketing of the shop began immediately with groups of the employes taking turns pacing back and forth in front o fthe place. No trouble was reported.

Hochman declared that the work ing force was being held to a contract which expired, he said, last July 1, and that girls were also being hired at wages running from $8 to $10 a week.

The walkout in the Matthews & Kadetsky shop, where women's garments are made, followed a report that more than 1,000 women raincoat-makers were prepared to strike in Boston and that fifty shops would be affected.

James Cimaguia, factory manager, denied that the contract has expired, asserting that it is in force until 1927. He also denied discrimination in the employment of girls and said that the girls drawing $10 or less a week are two schoolgirls working during their Summer vacations.

IF U. S. CONSUL DRINKS WATER HE MUST PAY BILL

Washington, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—If the water of Rangoon is good enough for the 293,000 Burmese, is good enough for the American vice-consul there, in the opinion of Comptroller-General McCarl.

Keyne V. Graum, the vice-consul at Rangoon, included an item of $11.30 for special drinking water at his expense account and submitted a report by the health officer on the municipal water supply. This report merely set forth that the water contained too many micro-organisms without disclosing the presence of noxious germs, and the comptroller-general disapproved the expenditure on the ground that the purchase of special water had been based merely on apprehension of diseases and not upon immediate necessities.

WILSON PLANS PROMOTIONS

The police force is excited over the possibility of many promotions and transfers in the department before police headquarters is moved to the new building on Berkeley street.

Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson has frequently said he wishes to have all vacancies filled by the first week in September, when the move from Pemberton square is to be made, and he has conferred several times with Superintendent Michael H. Crowley regarding promotions and transfers.

Some officer is to be made a captain to take the place left vacant by the death of Captain Hickey of the East Boston division, and there is at least one lieutenancy to be filled.

TRIES DEATH AT 'LIBERTY ISLE'

New York, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.).—Georges Zagorsky, 25, thwarted in his attempt to plunge to death from a parapet 100 feet above the base of the Statute of Liberty on Bedloe's Island, was kept under surveillance today pending disposition by immigration officials.

Zagorsky, son of a former brigadier-general of old Russia, attempted to leap off the parapet when told he must return to his native land where, he insists, execution awaits him at the hands of the Bolshevik. Corporal Jack Poole seized the Russian and subdued him after a struggle.

"That is my mother, now," shouted the Russian, pointing to the Statue of Liberty. "I threw myself in her arms, but she will not have me. I want to die at her feet."

STONEHAM MAN DROPS DEAD IN DRUG STORE

Suffering, apparently from a heart spell, Walter Hatch of No. 15 Mark street, Stoneham, walked into a drug store at No. 100 Dorchester street, South Boston, today, and dropped dead before he could utter a word to the clerk.

Medical Examiner Magrath, after viewing the body, said death was due to natural causes. Hatch had been troubled with heart disease for years.

Greta Garbo Again in Goldwyn Cast

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 18.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer spread the red velvet carpet at the studios in Culver City yesterday. The reason for all this rejoicing was that Greta Garbo has returned to the fold and has consented to resume her place in "The Flesh and the Devil."

Greta walked off the set last week and said that nothing on earth would induce her to return.

Greta Garbo

But other women have been known to change their minds, so why not the Swedish actress. Jack Gilbert did not hesitate to say that he wanted Miss Garbo back and would tell her so. He is evidently pleased that she has changed her mind.

Clarence Brown, the director, is also pleased because in addition to all the billing, bookings and what-have-yous made out in her name, he had planned his story with Gilbert and Garbo in mind.

Miss Garbo will have a chance to see whether she likes a Swedish leading man or an American hero, for Lars Mangen, the young Swedish actor who received such favorable comments on his work in "The Scarlet Letter" opposite Lillian Gish, has been cast for one of the important roles.

It was interested to hear that Ronald Colman, who is a star of final importance with Mr. Gilbert, was offered the role to be played by Hansen. Gilbert is one of the few stars with the good sense to put a good picture first and stardom second.

He was particularly eager to have Colman and, it is said, agreed to have equal billing. But, of course, with all Samuel Goldwyn's plans for him Colman could not be spared.

JAMES HUSSEY, VAUDEVILLE ARTIST and former leading man in Elsie Janis' musical comedy, "Puzzles of 1923," is returning to New York Thursday. But "Jimmie" is coming back. He has put his signature to a contract with Associated First National to play comedy roles, and now he has to swallow his words about refusing to go into the movies.

"I am crazy about California," he told me. "When I was here last year I announced there was no money in the world at that time that would keep me here, but I have had a chance to spend my vacation at the beach and to get acquainted with the film people, and now my first interest in life will be to get back and begin my film career."

I WAS MUCH INTERESTED TO LEARN that Nils Olaf Chrisander, who was recently imported to this country by Cecil De Mille, will direct Jetta Goudal.

It is no secret that Miss Goudal is a woman of temperament. Any studio in which she has worked will tell you fireworks and Jetta are first cousins. Well, probably Mr. Chrisander is also temperamental. Let us hope so.

He will direct her in "The Fighting Love." What's in a name, anyway? It was originally called "Rosita Forbes" and has been adapted to the screen from a novel by the same name by Beulah Marie Dix.

Jetta Goudal

Chrisander, formerly an actor, was a member of the U. F. A. organization and at one time played opposite Pola Negri. Later he was assistant director to Ernst Lubitsch, all of which should be good training to help him cope with Miss Goudal. Victor Varconi will have the lead opposite her.

I have often wondered what the U. F. A. company in Germany thought when one by one their directors were induced to come to America. I have discovered that they are not entirely pleased with the idea.

The way it came about was when Universal offered Lang, German director, a contract, U. F. A. appealed to Carl Laemmle and asked that they be allowed to keep at least one of their good directors.

A little later Famous Players-Lasky were imbued with the same idea of getting Lang to direct a special to be called "The Day of Judgment."

STABS HIMSELF, TAKES POISON

Twice stabbed and suffering from the effects of poison, Girard Landers of Irma avenue, Watertown, was removed to the Cambridge City Hospital early today from the home of his sweetheart, Miss Ethel Morris, in Crescent street.

A telephone communication from the home of Jabez Morris sent the ambulance to the scene to transport Landers to City Hospital.

Police investigated and were informed by Morris that Landers was keeping company with Morris' daughter, Ethel. He had been staying at the Morris home for two or three weeks, it was stated.

Last evening, the police report added, Landers retired evidently in good spirits. It was not until after the stabbing and the draining of a vial of poison that members of the Morris family knew of the affair. The police were then summoned and Landers was removed to the hospital.

There is a used car for every need listed in the classified ads on the next to the last pages.

"BERWICK CAKE MAKES HOME SWEET HOME"

Berwickians

by Neal O'Hara

Some 150 years ago—pardon us if we give you a little outline of history—somebody cooked up the well known proverb, "You can't eat your cake and have it, too." It sounds like Benjamin Franklin was the author.

The idea was that a wise man should conserve his cake. If he ate it he was a wastrel. So it came about that a cake eater meant a spendthrift in those days

Well, time passed, as they say in the movie subtitles, and cake eater came to mean a man who powdered his nose. In other words, a fellow who would rather have a hunk of well baked jelly roll than a thick broiled steak.

Call a he-man a cake eater now and he wants to fight about it. But as a matter of fact, most men ARE cake eaters. We daresay rough birds like Tom Mix and Hoot Gibson consume as much fancy pastry as Rudolph Valentino.

After all, the only difference between a he-man and a cake eater is that the he-man orders it for dessert while the cake eater makes it his main dish.

But whichever class you fall into, we recommend the Berwick varieties. They satisfy. And you don't have to walk a mile to get them—they're at the corner store now.

T. L. E., BOSTON.—You are right regarding the birthdates of Alice Terry, but I don't see how you are going to settle your bet on the lunches because you are mistaken on the color of her hair. It is dark brown. You have been misled into thinking her a blonde because for various pictorial purposes she has generally used a most magnificent straw-colored wig. She married Rex Ingram shortly after completing her second picture under his direction.

W. I. H., BROOKLINE.—"Glorifying The American Girl" will be a Paramount production and—the way it looks now—something to "write home about" because Florenz Ziegfeld, Jesse Lasky and Von Stroheim are due to give it their very closest and personal attention.

R. E. S., BEVERLY.—Undoubtedly you may look for some kind of "follow up" on "The Big Parade," as it is reported that Famous Players will make a certain war epos called, "Wings," a treatment of the big scuffle having much to do with airplanes. It is to be directed, by the way, by William Wellman, a former Bostonian, and the production is intended as a "road-show." Clara Bow will probably appear as the heroine.

A. E. Z., PROVIDENCE.—Malcolm St. Clair will direct "The Popular Sin," which features Florence Vidor, Clive Brook and Greta Nissen.

COMPELLED TO HANG SELF AND 3, WIFE'S NOTE SAYS

London, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.).—"The man to whom I am bound by law compelled me to do this."

With this note pinned to a table nearby, Mrs. Mary Halse, forty-five, and her three children, Tony, thirteen; Peggy, twelve, and Patty, five, were found today with ropes around their necks hanging from the thatched roof of a cottage in the remote hamlet of Patmore Heath, Hertfordshire. They were all dead.

$3,500 WORTH OF GOOD FOOD GOES INTO LAKE

Worcester, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Fresh fruit and vegetables valued at nearly $3,500 are at the bottom of Lake Quinsigamond today, the result of a large truck, owned by the J. Cuneo Company of Hartford, Ct., getting out of control on the down grade on Belmont street. The truck, racing down this grade, climbed the sidewalk about the middle of the lake bridge, crashed into the cement coping and tipped on its side.

TEACHING LIES IN SCHOOL HIT

Hartford, Ct., Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Leaders in educational circles exploded several theories in discussing problems facing school teachers at the three-day meeting of school superintendents and State supervisors which will continue here today.

Dr. Guy M. Wilson of the school of education of Boston University, declared that teachers must make the work of pupils more interesting and send children home with a spirit of accomplishment. There should be no failures in school life, he said. The speaker urged his audience to counteract dislike of school and disparagement of teachers.

Dr. William F. Russell of Teachers College, N. Y., referring to "history" mentioned the George Washington and the cherry tree story as warning against teaching patriotism by telling lies. He expressed the opinion that every child in this country did not have equal educational opportunities and cautioned against the many organizations and societies that were trying to get religion into schools or evolution out of them, while others worked for opposite results.

IRON PICKETS BURNED TO FREE SUICIDE'S BODY

New York, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—A suicide today suffered a death such as was inflicted in the ages of psychical torture.

Hyman Zuckerman, a Brooklyn laundry owner was impaled on a six-foot iron picket fence when he leaped from the roof of a six-story building in Second avenue.

The iron spikes had to be burned through with acetylene torches before the body could be removed.

LAVELLE HITS AT 'REFORMERS'

Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle, former assistant district attorney, now candidate for the Democratic nomination for district attorney of Suffolk County, took an indirect slam at reformers in his speeches initiating his campaign.

"The delirious rush of virtue to the untrained mind may work havoc in a community," he said. "A lack of judgment in the district attorney's office may wreck many homes and ruin many business careers."

He deplored any attempt to drag the grand jury, "one of our most solemn functions in the administration of criminal laws," into a political campaign.

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, candidate for re-election, opened a series of house rallies at the home of Joseph M. Heffernan, No. 161 East Cottage street, Dorchester.

"By the vote given me four years ago," said the district attorney, "it was plainly evident that there was a sincere desire for a clean county administration. I have demonstrated that it is possible to administer the district attorney's office with honesty, along humanitarian lines, and entirely without the political interference of any unit of any party."

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

South Shore Society Waits Eagerly for Cohasset Horse Show Friday

ALL THE SOUTH SHORE IS ON THE QUIvive for the Cohasset Horse Show on Friday, at the Hugh Bancroft estate. More than fifty exhibitors for the more than twenty classes, a list of trophies donated by prominent Cohasset folk, and a program commencing at ten in the morning and winding up at six or thereabouts, are interesting details.

AS TO HOSPITALITIES, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft takes all the lead in that respect and entertains for all the exhibitors at luncheon. Her daughter, Miss Jessie Bancroft, and Mrs. William B. Gagnebin (Suzanne Mandell) are directing heads of the affair.

BOTH THESE LAST will hold the reins over various of their horses in more than one class, for both are spirited riders and own a string of thoroughbreds. Other fair riders in this, Cohasset's first horse show for a decade, are Mrs. Arthur Blake, Mrs. Clifton Bremer and Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer.

THE LATTER, EQUALLY AT HOME in the saddle or the courts, has several entries. Mrs. Homer Loring, exhibitor at many a show, and always a ribbon winner, brings a string of mounts for the Cohasset show, which, like so many other horse shows hereabouts, is to benefit the American Legion post of the town.

A FOURSOME OF JUDGES enrolled includes Samuel Shaw, George H. Mandell (father of Mrs. Gagnebin) and Frederick Alley, together with Mrs. G. M. Grinnell—experts each in the judging of fine horseflesh.

CHILDREN OPEN the show, the first class on the cards being for children's harness horses. There are three classes for children in jumping competitions, and many others, all the regulation classes which go to make up a well-rounded show.

MESDAMES BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, Theodore Little, Hugh Bancroft, Franklin McElwain, George S. C. Badger, Thomas M. James, Edward Bayley, William Underwood, Arthur N. Millikin, Delano White, C. Griggs Clarke, William A. Bancroft, William DeFord Beal and James Eustace will show.

ALSO MISS MURIEL CROCKER, Joseph S. Bigelow, Dr. George G. Sears, William Reynolds, William Cordingley, Eugene McGregor, Mrs. Ralph Hornblower, Joseph Donovan, Sidney Mason, Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Felix Lupoff and ever so many others.

APPROACH TO the Hugh Bancroft place, by way of Sohier street and straight up the hill, brings one to this extensive farm on a fair Cohasset hillside overlooking the ocean. The show is held in the ring built on the estate for Miss Jessie Bancroft by her parents.

THE OPINION of Bailey's Beach and the Avenue in Newport is that the four beautiful daughters of Mr. William Woodwards are perhaps the Summer spa's best dressed sister group. And of the four, some declare that Miss Elizabeth Woodward leads her sisters by a hat, as one might say.

AT ANY RATE, they carry on the tradition, on the distaff side, for much pulchritude and a flair for perfect dressing. The four are the Misses Elizabeth, already mentioned, Sarah, Edith and Ethel. Miss Edith bears the name of her aunt and godmother, Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames of Boston.

THE LINER MAURETANIA, after a speedy "turn-around" at New York, today steams away eastward again for the old world with a large and important passenger list of social lights, cinema stars and men of affairs in business and professions. From Boston, Mr. and Mrs. William Endicott embark.

BRITISH KING AND QUEEN ON SCOTLAND HOLIDAY

London, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—King George and Queen Mary are in Scotland for a quiet holiday after the strenuous London Summer social season which was followed by the Cowes regatta.

On the northward trek this year, Queen Mary occupied for the first time a new railway coach, built especially for her use. It contains, besides a luxurious boudoir and bedroom, a fully equipped bathroom, which is something of a novelty in an English train, few of which ever make twelve hour runs.

PHILOSOPHY OF GIRLHOOD IN SERIAL

Some fellows go all through life looking for a girl. Others find so many attractive playmates that they find it hard to make a choice. That's the way it is with Jock Hamill.

Jock happens to be the hero of Katherine Brush's new novel, "The Woman Game" which will appear in the Boston Evening American, beginning next Monday.

Jock gets so much experience with the fair sex that he becomes quite a philosopher on the subject. Of course every man knows what he wants himself. And after a while he gets a pretty good idea of what the other fellows want.

So this young college man, bright and snappy, begins to set standards. They are pretty good ones, incidentally. At least that is what his pals say.

The girls sometimes fill Jock's bill of ideals. Sometimes they don't. Sometimes they make him like them anyway.

It's one of the most intriguing stories you ever will have the chance to read.

Begin "The Woman Game" in the Boston Evening American.

Next Monday.

MAN HURLED INTO N. Y. RIVER; TAXI SUSPECT HELD

New York, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.).—Harbor police were searching today for the body of a man believed to have been thrown while alive from a taxi by a fellow passenger off the Manhattan bridge into the East River. Edward Frisch, post office employe, is held pending investigation.

According to William Cunniff, taxi driver, Frisch and the man now missing, he said, had been drinking heavily and agreed to ride together. Cunniff and Frisch told police that the third man, drunk, became objectionable and to be ejected from the taxi. Two other witnesses said they saw Cunniff and Frisch push a third man over the rail into the river. Cunniff was questioned and released.

A preliminary meeting between representatives of the miners and operators was arranged for tomorrow, when the miners' request for a resumption of negotiations will be discussed.

Hingham Is Just Like Ireland! No Snakes!

St. Patrick has come to Hingham according to Chief of Police "Wash" James.

After receiving 26 telephone calls during the night about the "20-foot black snake" seen on the greens of the West Hingham Country Club, the head of the department declared that there isn't a snake in Hingham.

"The Braintree police were called in on it, anyway," said Wash, "and there may be snakes in Braintree, but in Hingham, no."

Asked what had caused the furore about the snake, Chief "Wash" said: "Probably a knocked down telegraph pole."

Manville, R. I., Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Whether or not a general strike will be called in the mill of the Manville-Jenckes company will be decided upon tonight at a mass meeting in the opera house.

Operations are crippled by a further walkout of about 300 workers in the spinning, carding and spooling rooms on a claim the mill was to return to a 54-hour week schedule in place of the present 48 hours. This the mill officials deny. About 800 workers remain in the mill.

28 Died in Blowup on Mackinac Year Ago

Today is the first anniversary of the dread Mackinac disaster in Newport Harbor. Just a year ago today 672 merry excursionists left Pawtucket on the steamer Mackinac. The effort to fix responsibility for the disaster is still before the courts, and on October 18 three defendants will face trial.

RICKARD BRINGS MANDAMUS ACTION

LICENSE BODY HOLDS ADVANTAGE

Dempsey's Separate Action Will Be Delayed, Atty. Driscoll Announces

New York, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.)—Mandamus proceedings, designed to force the license commission to show cause why Jack Dempsey should not be granted a permit to meet Gene Tunney here on September 16, were brought today by Tex Rickard on behalf of the Madison Square Garden Corporation. The proposed separate action by Dempsey may be delayed.

Arthur F. Driscoll, the champion's attorney, made this known this morning in announcing that a further conference with Rickard and Gene Normile was scheduled for today.

"If we decide that Dempsey should start proceedings, I will leave for Saratoga tonight," Driscoll said, "I will return as soon as I get Dempsey's signature to the papers, but I cannot hope to file the proceedings before Friday morning."

Opinion here was general that the license committee can overcome favorable court action by revoking Rickard's license at the Yankee Stadium.

Champion Hits Highways in Hard Day's Workout

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 18 (A.P.)—Cool, snappy weather put real pep into Jack Dempsey's road work today in the vicinity of the heavyweight champion's training camp at White Sulphur Springs, near here.

After a five or six-mile journey he returned to his quarters to prepare for an afternoon in the ring with a somewhat depleted force of sparring partners.

Phil Weisberger, Brooklyn light heavyweight, and Bill Clemens of West Virginia were released by the champion today because they failed to measure up to his requirements for fast, lively work. Both were strong and able, Dempsey found, but a trifle slow.

A wire was sent today to Tillie "Kid" Herman of El Paso, Tex., to report at White Sluphur as soon as possible to work on the sparring staff. Dempsey has worked with Herman before, the trainers announced, and has found him a clever opponent.

Arthur F. Driscoll, counsel for the champion, who was on his way here to get Dempsey's signature to papers intended to force the hand of the State Boxing Commission in the championship bout tangle, had not arrived by noon today.

Billy Southworth's second homer of the afternoon with two men on bases enabled the Cardinals to nose out Brooklyn, 3 to 2. St. Louis is now only one game behind Pittsburgh.

Guy Bush of the Cubs gets on the rule of grant-killer by holding the New Yorkers to two hits and winning under the score, 6 to 0. Bush didn't walk a man and not a Giant got past first base.

Although the Yankees lost to the White Sox, 5 to 2, in a five-inning affair in which Catcher Pat Collins broke all altitude records for throwing to bases, New York's lead remained to nine games.

The slipping Indians lost both ends of a double-header to the second-string Athletics, 9 to 5 and 6 to 4, and now lead the Mackmen by only half a game. Fresch poled out seven hits.

Cobb Brands Griffith Vicious Gentleman

Washington, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.)—Accusing Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, with inspiring local sports writers to attack him, Ty Cobb, manager of the Detroit Tigers, wrote an open letter to Griffith today in which he described the Washington magnate as "a vicious gentleman," and declared he was "guilty of prevarication."

The letter was published in the Washington Times.

Bad feeling developed between the Tigers' star and Griffith in a recent series in which Griffith charged Cobb with delaying the game.

Inside Golf

It is instinctive in the golf swing to "want to help" with the body. This instinct for putting the body into the blow is what fools many players, because this instinct has to be governed and changed into an instinct to put the club into the blow. There is a vast difference between swinging the body and swinging the club, but once the golfer will govern his actions just enough to give him a feel of the club swinging he will quickly sense the difference. The body moves forward easily, without any effort whatever, as the club starts forward, and the player whips the club into the ball wholly with his shoulders, arms and wrists. The body should have a feeling of being pulled through after the clubhead.

NEW YORK Y. C. STARTS ANNUAL CRUISE

New London, Aug. 18 (A.P.)—America's yachting classic—the annual cruise of the New York Yacht Club, with between 50 and 60 yachts of various sizes participating, was started from here at 10:15 this morning, when the starting gun sent the 40 and 40-footers away on the first race of the cruise, one of 37 nautical miles to Newport, with the navy challenge cups as the prizes for the winners of the various classes.

Weather conditions were very un favorable. Rain was falling heavily and there was very little breeze, barely sufficient to hold up the sails of the yachts as they settled down on Long Island Sound and headed for a leaden horizon.

Weakness of the wind compelled delay in starting the yachts from the starting line off Southwest Ledge Light.

Gherardi Davis, Edmund Land and Clinton Mackenzie, comprising the racing committee for the cruise, started the sloops off from the log. Eugene F. Moran of New York. Five minutes after the first vessels were sent away the starting gun was sounded for the Sound type of vessels, and ten minutes later the schooner yachts were sent across the line. Among the latter were the former America's cup yachts Vanitie and Resolute; Commodore W. W. Aldrich's Flying Cloud, Commodore Nat Ayer's Lynx, recently brought here from Italy, where she was built; John S. Lawrence's Advance; C. L. Harding's Wildfire, Harold S. Vanderbilt's Vagrant and J. V. Santry's Pilone. Many power yachts and steam yachts are cruising along with the racers. Among the steam vessels are J. Pierpont Morgan's Corsair, flagship of the New York Yacht Club, with Commodore George S. Nichols aboard, and the Aloha, owned by former Commodore Arthur Curtis James.

Racing for th sklop's cup and the Astor cup will be sailed on Thursday and Friday on the ocean course off Newport.

BROOKLYN GETS PIRATE REBEL OUTFIELDER

Pittsburgh, Aug. 18 (A.P.)—Max Carey, fleet outfielder, has been claimed on waivers by Brooklyn, Pittsburgh National officials announced today. Waivers were asked on the Pirate captain after he had been suspended when it was discovered he was leading a movement to oust Fred Clarke, assistant coach, from the players' bench.

Skeeter Bigbee and Babe Adams, also involved in the anti-Clarke agitation, were released unconditionally. With the expiration of the waiver time limit today, Sam Dreyfuss, treasurer of the Pirates, announced Carey would go to Brooklyn for the waiver price of $4,000.

Brooklyn and the New York Giants were the only teams putting in a claim for Carey, Dreyfuss said. All other National League and all American League clubs waived on him.

Waivers had been obtained previously on Bigbee and Adams. It was reported that Baltimore was after Adams and that Kansas City seeks to Land Bigbee.

Time Hampers Babe Ruth's Ambition

With only 35 more games to play the chances of Babe Ruth's surpassing his home run record of 1921 are dwindling rapidly. Not that this is any discredit to the Bambino, for his 1926 record establishes him as a more valuable player than he ever has been, but here are the facts:

Ruth has 39 homers now, which is seven behind his mark on this date in 1921, the year of his record-smashing. On August 18 five years ago a Babe had clouted 46 four-ply blows.

From then until the season's end he knocked but thirteen, which is a pretty torrid pace.

In order to equal his record he must now seek the gift for a row 20 more times, a most unlikely occurrence in 35 games. And in order to set a new mark, 21 homers would be necessary. It is possible, but it is not probable.

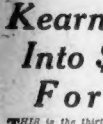
You are the most unselfish man I've ever had to deal with. I congratulate you on being a true sportsman and England for having had such a man on her sporting roster."



Jack Kearns

Driving that home I turned to Carpentier: "Georges you've heard what Mr. Cochran had just said. He releases you from your gentlemen's agreement because I am giving you $200,000 to box Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight championship of the world."

You could have knocked them all down with a lemonade straw. Brady, who had been sitting around and not saying a word, chewed his cigar in two and quickly called Cochran into another room and I was left with the others.

Cochran and Brady came back in a few minutes and said:

"We will give Carpentier the $200,000 ourselves." Brady had sized up the situation.

"That's fine," I said. "I don't care who pays him so long as he gets the $200,000 that I've promised him. All I wanted to be assured was that Georges would be released from that agreement. Mr. Cochran has done that.

BRADY STANDS PAT.

We talked of England and America as battle grounds for this great international match. I made an appointment with Brady to meet at his theatre the next day.

Brady was all smoked up over the match and its London possibilities. Cochran came in as we were talking. I saw he was getting cold. What did I think about taking it to England? I didn't care. I repeated that I was only happy over the thought that Carpentier was to get his $200,000 and that Cochran had seen fit to release Carpentier from that agreement.

Tex Rickard

William A. Brady

I excused myself for a moment and going into Brady's front office I picked up a phone and called Rickard at the Garden.

"Tex would you like to go into a three cornered partnership, on the promotion of a Dempsey and Carpentier match?" I asked Tex. "Fine, oh fine. Who are the other two?" he asked.

RICKARD TAKES CHANCE.

"Billy Brady and Charles Cochran of England. I'll get them to take you in as partner. You three are paying Carpentier $200,000 for his end."

"What," yelled Tex.

"That's the agreement. You'll have to kick in if you're a partner. It's on. Is that right?"

"Right," said Tex. The old bird always was a gambler and a good one. I'll say that for him.

Georges Carpentier

"Tex," I said. "Run up to Brady's office in the playhouse. Jump in a cab and make it snappy."

I went back into the room with Brady and Cochran.

"Gentlemen," I began, "I'm afraid I can't go through with this. I've got a story to tell you. I'll see what you think about it. Otherwise I can't go through."

"What's the story?" said Brady.

"Well, I had a previous understanding with Rickard. No signed papers or anything else, but one of those agreements that Cochran had with Georges. I promised Tex Rickard that if I put on this match he would be in on the promotion of it. If it goes to England, it will affect him off. It's all O. K. with me if you take him in as a third partner. It's up to you men."

COCHRAN SEES LIGHT.

Cochran's face lit up. He was agreeable, Brady balked.

He was coming around to the arrangement when Tex and his little cane walked in.

They went into a conference and I thought it about time to call in the newspapermen. I told the three of them that I had offers from other sources and that they might just as well be prepared for a little competition.

"Who are the others?" asked Brady.

"They're men who will give Carpentier just what you fellows are willing to pay him. You're in the field with the others. I think it is due the match to have a little publicity on so that if you fellows will agree to be at the Claridge Hotel tomorrow I'll have the newspaper men there."

Everybody was there and much was made of the occasion. Now for my other bidders.

They were to be two wealthy men from Cuba and they came, representing the sugar industry and the Cuban government. So I got me a brace of Cubans. I went around to one of the night clubs where I knew my prop Cuban was located. He was a head waiter. He didn't need more than five minutes' coaching.

He was the great Senor from Cuba who "could not speaka da Eenglish," but he had lots of money and was willing to lay it on the line. He got one of his assistants to come along as his interpreter.

The cue was to come representing a lot of millionaires and to pull rubber check at the proper time.

At the signal my dignified Cuban got up and with all the courtliness of his headwaiter calling, he unfolded, in amazing Spanish, his plan to cart the big row off to Cuba.

His interpreter let us in on it in broken English. They flashed their check and said they had plenty more in the banks around town. Rickard and Brady wanted to know who they were and I told them they were a couple of Cubans who were out to get the bout at any cost.

"They're ready to post a forfeit. If you fellows are not ready they are sure, I want to close this thing before Carpentier sails."

Tomorrow Kearns tells how he made promoters pay $300,000 for Dempsey's end of bout with Carpentier.

FOSSIANO TO TRY BOSTON LIGHT SWIM

Frederick C. Fossiano of No. 3 Dane St., Beverly, one of the best known long distance swimmers along the North Shore, has entered in the Boston Light swim which is to take place Sunday, Aug. 22, from Charlestown bridge to the Boston Light, an approximate distance of 12 miles.

F. C. Fossiano

The swim is an annual event and is being sponsored by members of the Somerset Swimming Club.

Fossiano's entrance in the swim adds much interest, due to the fact that he has participated in all the long distance swims in New England. He has successfully swam from Dane Street Beach, Beverly, to Rakers Island, Salem, on several occasions

WISE and OTHERWISE

by STED CHANDLER

GERTRUDE EDERLE swam the English Channel in record time. She conformed to all of the existing regulations. She walked in, swam all the way and walked out. True, she had a tugboat alongside, but to date, a tugboat has been part of the accepted equipment of Channel swimmers.

No sooner, however, did the news of her record-breaking time seep through the general intelligence than the inevitable anvil chorus was mobilized and our eardrums shattered by the ensuing din.

WE have little sympathy for the European press which launches its attack against Gertrude. Even if it had the correct angle, which we doubt very much, we would not be in sympathy with its outburst. We have no sympathy for anyone who indulges in a "vulgar display of the emotions" when such a display smacks so rancidly of sour grapes.

IN the first place, what would they have the girl do? Do they think it necessary to make the feat acceptable to have her swim the unfriendly Channel alone with help at such a distance as to be of no value?

What constitutes swimming the Channel? It is to swim the entire distance, is it not? It is certainly not worth anyone's risk to plunge in at Gris-Nez and tack towards Dover on the wild chance of eventually landing there. Some assistance is necessary as a mere precaution in safeguarding the swimmer's life, and that is no violation of sportsmanship.

THE trouble is that Gertrude had too little heart in breaking the record. Taking a matter of two hours off the men's mark was too much for a public which is as anti-feminist as the European public undoubtedly is.

Leaders Hold Places As Popularity Battle Rages

Today's reports show that Heiny Wills still leads the Hearst Popularity Contest in New England and Dick Howell is still topping them all in the nation-wide totals.

As for the relative positions of the other contenders there has been no change. The complete vote is for Howell first, followed by Babe Ruth, Helen Wills and Red Grange in that order.

The New England vote is for Helen, with Babe Ruth continuing to press close behind, and Bobby Jones, Glenna Collett, Jack Dempsey, Gertrude Ederle and Charlie Paddock stringing after.

The last totals received from the South showed Bob Smith of the Braves ahead of Bobby Jones by a few votes.

Many fans are not sending in 50 word letters with their ballots. By so doing you can make yourself eligible for the prizes which are to be awarded the voters in addition to the prizes which will come to the winners, not only the winner of the contest, but the most popular athlete in each separate sport.

One ballot apiece three names—your first, second and third choices; American athletes in active competition, and there you have the sum total of the regulations. Send your votes to the Popularity Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass.

SET FINNEGAN BOUT BACK TWO DAYS

The anxiously awaited featherweight bout between Honeyboy Finnegan and Red Chapman, which will be the feature event of the Mahoney Tribute to be conducted by the Suffolk A. A., was yesterday postponed from next Tuesday night until Thursday, Aug. 26.

The postponement was decided upon by Matchmaker Tom Goodwin after Finnegan had intimated that he would like a couple of extra days to train and because of the possibility of Chapman emerging from his bout with Eddie Lord at Hartford with some minor injury.

This Finnegan should desire the bout delayed for even an hour indicates the seriousness with which the angular Dorchester southpaw regards his bout with the Chelsea championship claimant.

While no explanation was offered by the Finnegan forces, it is presumed that Honeyboy is anxious to get as much boxing as possible with the fastest and cleverest sparring partners obtainable to the end that his hitting, blocking and ducking may become sharpened to a degree, and because, too, he wants to scale down to the prescribed weight limit, 128½ pounds, by easy stages.

CONFIDENCE MANIFESTED

The fact that Tom Carroll, manager of Honeyboy, should accept a match with Mike Dundee of Rock Island, one of the participants in the featherweight championship elimination tourney conducted by the New York State Commission, which resulted in Louis (Kid) Kaplan being declared champion, in Philadelphia, Aug. 1, bespeaks the confidence in the Finnegan case.

At Martin Flaherty's camp at Wamesit, where Dick is preparing himself for the Chapman bout, there is a feeling of absolute confidence and it is even hinted that the hard hitting portsider is sanguine of scoring a knockout over his famous opponent.

Chapman is not worrying over the bout. The Chelsea redhead admits that his greatest local rival has shown remarkable improvement since Red outpointed him slightly a couple of years ago.

He also figures, that he has improved vastly and that his speed and cleverness, plus his experience, he will again be able to outscore the Dorchester southpaw.

FULLER WORKS HARD

Anyway, the fact that the bout has been put back until a week from tomorrow night should serve to enhance the interest and assures the committee in charge of the benefit for the widow and nine children of the late Johnny Mahony that the seating capacity of Fenway Field on the evening of Aug. 26 will be taxed to the utmost.

CHASING the CHAMPION

By HARRY WILLS.

Chapter XV.

THE bout with Fred Fulton, of which I have told you, brought me my first big purse. My second big shot came when I met Tut Jackson over in Ebbets Field. That affair with Jackson shows what publicity can do in the boxing game.

My share of the purse for meeting this false alarm was close to $22,000.

No one in the East had ever heard of Tut Jackson until the papers began to smoke him up. He was something of a local idol around Cincinnati.

For some unknown reason people began to think that he was a real fighter and the New York papers carried daily stories about him.

Soon there was a demand for me to meet him. By the time the night of the fight arrived the papers had got the fans to believe that Jackson was a demon who was likely to knock me clean out of the ring. As a result of all this publicity Ebbets Field was packed and the bout drew close to $100,000.

I did not know any more about Jackson than I had read in the papers. While I took some of the stories with more than a dash of salt they had me thinking he must be pretty good, so I did not neglect to train. This Jackson person proved to be a terrible bust.

Tut was so frightened that his teeth were chattering when I went over to shake hands. As soon as the gong sounded he folded himself up into a knot and refused to come out of it.

I hated to hit a man who could not hit back, but it was up to me to do something, so I reached around behind his protecting elbows and socked him one in the ribs to make him straighten up.

Tut Jackson

By clinching and holding he stuck around until the third round, when the referee stopped it.

The Boxing Commission held some kind of an investigation to find out who was responsible for this affair. They did not try to put the blame on me.

My next big purse was earned almost as easily. This was the bout with Kid Norfolk in Madison Square Garden.

Norfolk never wanted any part of my game. We left each other alone until he got the idea that I was going back as a result of the reports of my two bouts with Bill Tate that had drifted East.

Norfolk could always lick Tate, so the Kid figured that if Bill could hold me to a draw, I must be in bad shape. He finally consented.

Kid Norfolk

All Norfolk's fear of me came back as soon as we got into the ring. He began to use his feet, running around in a circle as I chased after him.

I could not catch him in the first, but early in the second he let fly a left hook. I stepped inside at the same time bringing my right up to the jaw in a short uppercut.

The kid went over on his back and was counted out, although I think he could have got up in time if he thought he had a chance to last the route.

SUZANNE, QUEEN OF TENNIS, SURE TO PLAY IN BOSTON

PYLE PLANS FOR VISIT OF CHAMP

Question of Dates and Opponents, Says Her Manager

By STED CHANDLER

The Cash and Carry System conceived and perfected by Monsignor Cash and Carry Pyle, the man who has made his own name approximate, is about to encroach upon the beanstudded purity of Boston.

Monsignor Cash and Carry Pyle has landed in New York after a big game hunt in Europe which netted the most valuable captures in modern history, Suzanne Lenglen, besides whom the pyle poll shrinks to insignificance.

And the powerful promoter announces that among the early stopping places of his new charge, Boston will be honored as the third. In keeping with the methods of Pyliem, Monsignor Pyle declines to mention anything definite as a date or a name of Suzanne opponents, if any, but with his tongue tucked carefully in his cheek he leads his public to believe that his words are by no means idle.

Suzanne Lenglen

None other than Colonel Bob McKirdy, the owner of Boston's professional football team, boxing impresario and an intimate friend of Pyle's, will book Suzanne's engagements in Boston. Colonel McKirdy declares that her local appearances will materialize some time in October, and that she will play here after matches in New York and Philadelphia.

New England tennis followers will seize upon this news with avidity, for when the veil is lifted from Pyle's veiled statements it probably will develop that not only Suzanne, but the other nine leading feminine players who are about to forsake the lily-white ranks (according to Pyle) for the impure but well paid legions of lucre, will migrate to Boston to demonstrate the new art of professional tennis.

The matches undoubtedly will be played in the Arena, whose expanse of court space and new gallery seating will fit the presence of the fleet athlete calculated capable of melting the Arena's ice.

Thus far details are lacking. But it would seem that lack of details is what makes a sporting event red-letter nowadays, so perhaps we should expect the best.

Colonel McKirdy was serious when he informed us that Suzanne Lenglen would actually grace the sidewalks of the Hub, and while you never can tell when Monsignor Pyle is serious and when he isn't you can usually bet your next-to-the-last dollar that his chirps are not for the Autumn breezes alone.

So we with McKirdy, have forebodings. Well, if not four, at least three. We have forebodins—pardon us, threebodings—that Queen Suzanne of the Tennis Courts will favor the Hub of the walkdown Universe with her royal presence.

DISCARD IS HERO OF CARDS' DRIVE

Here is Billy Southworth, once a member of the Boston Braves and New York Giants, who has boosted the St. Louis Cardinals into a running fight with the Pirates for the National League pennant with his clever stick work.

Yesterday Southworth hammered out two homers to help the Cards topple the Dodgers and advance to within a single game of the leading Pirates.

Photos were taken when Southworth played with Braves.

Boxing Notes

Headlining the mertis end of the bill is an amateur ranks. Al Friedman of Roslindale. Mertis won a very close, hard fight a short time ago and the Roslindale lad expects to even up matters.

TRUDIE EDERLE SOBS GOODBYE TO GRANDMA

Paris, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Gertrude Ederle and her entourage arrived here today from Stuttgart, Germany, after spending the night sitting up on the train because the sleeper was filled. Miss Ederle had barely registered at her hotel when she hailed a taxicab and set out on a shopping tour.

Bisingen, Germany, Aug. 18 (A.P.)—Gertrude Ederle, brilliant young American swimmer who recently conquered the English Channel, has had "auf wiedersehen" to her grandmother and relatives whom she has been visiting in this little town.

Miss Ederle's departure evoked even more touching scenes than her arrival. The girl clung to her grandmother exclaiming, amid sobs of "auf wiedersehen" ("good bye") repeatedly and promising to return next year at cherry blossom time. As her automobile left the house a crowd waved farewell.

France Raises Fund to Finance Channel Swim

Paris, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.).—France wants a mermaid capable of swimming the English Channel. With the channel in its own back-yard, France has never developed a swimmer capable of swimming the channel.

Now French sportsmen have raised a fund to pay the training expenses of a Frenchman to attempt the swim. Le Divan, who won the annual Seine swim of 24 hours, will probably be the first French contender.

More!

To smoke a LUCKY STRIKE is to not only get all that is found in any other cigarette. . . . .

But more! Much more. More than the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended.

At a great expense in extra machinery and labor, LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos are toasted.

"IT'S TOASTED." That means it is subjected to intense heat for 45 minutes which (1) removes all "bite" and harshness and which (2) develops the hidden flavors of the world's finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. Then (3) sudden chilling seals in the moist fragrance, insuring constant freshness.

These improvements have won millions of critical smokers to LUCKY STRIKES.

BECAUSE IT'S TOASTED

That's Why Luckies Taste So Good

29,412,243 FALSE TEETH FROM U. S. FOR EUROPE

Washington, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—The commerce department has found that false teeth, corsets, peanuts and pushcarts helped to swell the nation's pocketbook during the fiscal year ended June 30. And what's more, it looks as though the peculiar fancies of American flyputs and swatters is attracting numbers of buyers in foreign fields.

A total of 29,412,243 false teeth valued at $1,286,838 found their way to toothless Europeans during the year. The ancients who have not learned of the "corsetless age" bought $2,061,126 worth of American corsets while peanuts worth $302,241; pushcarts and hand trucks, $215,645; phonograph records $1,849,929, and rouges and other cosmetics valued at $1,441,848 were exported, together with nearly $200,000 worth of tanglefoot and fly chasers.

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Mrs. Elisha Flagg, mother of James Montgomery Flagg, author and illustrator, of New York, had so far recovered from shock resulting from an automobile accident at Biddeford Pool last night that removal to a hospital for observation is unnecessary, according to the attending physician. SECRET MARK ON 'KITCHENER COFFIN'

London, Aug. 18 (A.P.).—Charging that there had been a substitution of a new coffin for the one which he brought from Norway, Frank Power, British newspaper man, today announced that he will continue the "Kitchener inquiry."

"I agree with the authorities that the coffin now in Scotland Yard never contained human remains," Power said, discussing the coffin which was opened Monday by Scotland Yard and found to contain only clods and dirt.

NOT SAME COFFIN.

"But that is not the coffin which I brought from Norway. The secret mark which I placed on the inner shell of the original coffin is not there now.

"I am not making any accusations against anybody, but there must have been a substitution of some kind. I do not know whether the body that I claim to be Lord Kitchener has gone. My next move will be to probe deeper into this mystery."

HAD BEEN WARNED.

Powers declares that before the coffin's arrival at Waterloo road from Norway, he was repeatedly advised to take every precaution. He quoted a "very eminent man" as saying to him, "If they can, they will diddle you at last."

The Home Secretary today stated that the affair is still incomprehensible to him, and that he had not decided what action, if any, will be taken against Power.

SPECIAL CLUE FOR No. 14—She went to France to make a picture and met and married a man of wealth and title.

By THE CONTEST EDITOR

Take some of your courage, all your persistence and about the average amount of knowledge of motion-picture plays and motion-picture players and you may have a 70-day tour of the Mediterranean free of all expense.

How?

By success in The Boston Evening American's Greater Movie Season Contest, the third problem of which is printed today.

The winner of the first local award in this great contest will not only be given a tour of the Mediterranean on the steamship Orca of the Royal Mail Line but will be authorized to select a travelling companion.

Such a tour, with the reservations which already have been made for our First Prize winner and his (or her) friend, would cost $3,000 and be cheap at the price. Someone who reads these lines today—and someone's best friend—are going to get it for nothing!

Contest Picture No. 3 will be as easy to solve as either of the two which have preceded it. "Well, we can hear the movie fans say ing, "if this is all there is to it."

Don't take too much for granted, friends. The race is young.

On the other hand, do not let yourself become discouraged. Read the "clues" carefully. Study the 'Special Clues." Run over the list of movie-play titles and the list of names of star players. In these lists are the play-titles and the a tors' names which are used for contest purposes.

The Taxi Dancer

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

A Thrilling Story of Night Life and Night Clubs; a Mad Whirl of Adventure

Joslyn Poe, daughter of a proud, but impoverished Virginia family, wants a career, not marriage. Her mother wants her to wed. The wild blood of a line of daring women runs in her veins. She wants adventure. A seeress tells her of the "wildness" in her blood. She goes to a dance. She determines she will settle her problem that night—to marry George Rawson, well-to-do, but no dandy, or—go to New York in seek of adventure. She meets a stranger at the dance.

Milton Stein, the stranger, advises Joslyn to go to the city and to dance. Joslyn, hungry and discouraged, is heard weeping by Kittie Lane, a manicurist. Kittie gets Lee Rogers, a friend, to invite them to dinner.

While the girls are at the table with Rogers, James Kelvin, movie star, attempts to cultivate Joslyn's acquaintance There is a near row with Rogers. Kelvin goes away leaving with Joslyn a sense of some strange influence over her. A few days afterward Kittie is brought home blind from bad booze. Joslyn rushes to Stein's Academy to take a job as a "Taxi Dancer" to care for Kittie. In the academy she meets Stephen Bates, a man-about-town, who offers to go to Kittie's help.

Kittie's life and sight are saved by the doctors secured by Bates. They both go to a party at Bates'. Kelvin is there. He kills Bates in a quarrel.

Kittie saves Joslyn by telling the police that the death row war over her.

With Kelvin hiding in her apartment Joslyn is called by the district attorney. She beats him. Police watch her flat.

Great luck comes to Joslyn. She is offered $250 per week as a dancer. Brierhalter asks her not to accept and offers her $500.

CHAPTER XXVII.

"YOU shall not! You won't get through that door!"

Brierhalter slipped out of his overcoat, threw it across the balustrade in the hall. He was a compact man, lean but surprisingly solid through the arms and shoulders.

"I won't, eh?" His voice was low, stinging. "You think you can make a fool out of me, but you can't! My ideas are too strong for you to stomach, eh—you want to get rid of me with a lot of palaver about your virtue—why's you've got a man waiting at home for you in the little love nest! Well, I'm going to have a look at my rival, anyway!

His face was miserably pale, but the gray eyes were shining with a cold, steely glint. It came to Joslyn swiftly that this was a man used to triumphing over all obstacles; that the victorious fulfillment of his desires was a creed.

Against the bullet-like force of his will power, Joslyn had only one weapon . . . the eternal feminine, the native wit the barbed thrust of a woman at bay. Her character—her chastity—was, she knew, demolished in Brierhalter's eyes. Now, immediately, it was only a question of saving Kelvin.

"Suppose I do have a lover inside" she demanded with a sudden recklessness. "Suppose I prefer someone else to you . . . with all your money! What of it?"

Brierhalter blanched still paler.

"I'm glad you admit it!" he breathed in quef interest. "That simplifies matters . . . I wished to be the first, but

He had Joslyn discerned, no intention of leaving, and she lost color in desperation.

"Don't go through that door . . . he might kill you."

One of Brierhalter's eyebrows raised and for a second he paused immobile, the processes by which he weighed chances were functioning without any hampering weight of

"I'm going in," he announced

"You're not."

Joslyn spread herself across the doorway, a fragile, momentary barrier. Behind that door, she knew, Kelvin was listening silently. He would know, of course, from the conversation he could scarcely help overhearing, that she was not the police. The danger, however was practically as great. Brierhalter or any one else would be seeing him immediately.

"Don't, please don't!" she cried in a quick change of strategy . . . of voice. "We can talk this over . . . I'll meet you anywhere tomorrow

But that suggestion left Brierhalter cold, with a thin metallic smile about his lips.

"That's a bluff to gain time," he said acurely. "No, I'm going through Stand aside, please."

Joslyn turned the key in the door, but one of his hands shot out before she could fling the key over

FAMOUS POETS IN BITTER ROW

Disintegration of the American Poetry Association, which numbers among its members a large part of the literary aristocracy of New England and the United States, is threatened by accusations of a scandalling nature that have been made against the standing members of the organization. Poetic geniuses whose names are bywords both in this country and abroad are involved.

The whole affair centres chiefly in Boston where live the prominent literary personages who are the cultivators of the American Poetry Association, and it is rumored that the matter will be aired in court in the vicinity. It has finally been admitted that the charges are very serious and that resignations of important members have taken place as a result.

WOMAN'S AUTO WRECKED WHILE SHE'S TAKING TEST

A woman taking an automobile license examination and an inspector riding with her narrowly escaped serious injury today when the automobile was struck by a heavily loaded truck in Main street Malden and smashed against a telephone pole.

Everett Jay Harper, the inspector, and Mrs. Harper, the woman driver, were thrown to the floor of the car by the impact. Neither was injured.

The driver was Mrs. Alice E. Marshall of No. 610 Chestnut street, Lynn, and she was making a left hand turn out of Main street into Clinton street when the truck, owned by a Wakefield concern and operated by Elmore Follett of Wakefield, crashed into her car.

LYNN MAYOR'S SALLY CHALLENGE ANSWERED

Councillor-at-Large L. M. Ranger of Lynn will present at the council meeting of the Lynn City Council an order calling for the passage of an ordinance to prohibit parades and the playing of bands in the streets. If passed, no one will be allowed to parade with a band or drum corps without a permit from the mayor. The order is in answer to the challenge of Mayor Ralph S Bauer, who asked to be shown any way in which the city charter could be changed so as to permit such meetings on the streets.

CHECKS TIP TO SECRET SERVICE

Stop Investigating When They Learn Harold McCormick Is Paying Bills

(Copyright, 1926, by Universal Service and the Boston Evening American, Inc., reproduction in whole or part prohibited.)

New York, Aug. 18.—Agents of the Department of Justice stopped an investigation into the identity of the mystery Princess who posed to Harold Fowler McCormick as the daughter of the Sultan when they discovered that the large checks she was receiving were sent by the Chicago multi-millionaire

How Harold McCormick, from the hospital bed in Chicago, where he was recuperating from a gland operation, telephoned to the girl of mystery in Phoenix, Ariz., and instructed her to report the investigation to Assistant Secretary of State Lansing, can be told by this newspaper for the first time.

That the stories of the girl were false and that McCormick was fleeced out of a fortune are now the charges of two witnesses who have come forward since Universal Service began its exclusive series of articles on the McCormick Sultana's daughter case.

SENT TO ARIZONA.

The Department of Justice investigation took place in June, 1923, after the girl and her young husband Sidney Berman, had been sent by McCormick to Arizona, where the Chicago capitalist paid the expenses for the two while the girl battled with the tuberculosis which claimed her life a year later

Berman, Malden Lane insurance broker, has brought suit in Manhattan against McCormick to demand an accounting of an estate of $5,000,000 which Berman claims was intrusted to McCormick's custody

The Department of Justice entered the American career of the mystery girl when Lucy and Morrell of the Phoenix police department learned that large bank drafts, sent from Chicago to Carmen Sylvana were being cashed by the new arrival in town who lived as Mrs. Sidney Berman. Agent Slak was assigned to the case

NOTIFIED McCORMICK.

The Bermans immediately notified McCormick. Said Berman:

"Over the telephone—Mr. cormick was then still in bed after his operation—he told us to get in touch immediately with Robert Lansing in Washington. It was Lansing who had previously been retained to take care of the girl's finances and to investigate the status of the property left her in Chicago.

"Mr. McCormick's instructions were followed. We heard no more of the investigation but received a few weeks later that Agent Slak had been transferred."

Further investigation was made into the details of the story told by Max Katzen, West Fiftieth Street restaurant proprietor, who says he knew McCormick's "sultan's daugh ter" when the girl was a boy. He is a regular patient in Oak Forest Sanitarium near Chicago

Mexico City, Aug. 18 (I.N.S.).—An active campaign to communism is being carried on by the Roman Catholic clergy for the purpose of discrediting the Mexican government, Acting Foreign Minister General Estrada said today.

Here Are Rules of Contest! Read Them!

EVERY day for twenty consecutive publication days The Boston Evening American will print a scene from a different popular motion picture. The face or head of the star of the motion picture will be missing.

Everybody is invited to cut out these scenes and identify the star and the motion picture. Simply fill in the blank which is printed beneath the picture, using your knowledge of motion pictures generally and making use of the clews which will be printed with each picture.

The person who, at the close of the contest, sends in complete sets of the twenty scenes, naming the stars and the film plays correctly or most nearly correct, and who in other respects comply with these rules, will receive generous awards of unusual value.

The Grand National Prize will be a trip for two, around the world, on the steamship Belgenland of the Red Star Line. The Grand Local Prize will be a Mediterranean tour for two on the Royal Mail steamship Orca.

NO COST ENTAILED.

This contest is open to everybody except employes of the Boston Evening American and affiliated newspapers and persons engaged in any way in the production, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures.

To take part in this Greater Movie Season Contest will cost you nothing. It is not even required that you buy this newspaper. Copies or tracings of the pictures will be accepted on an equal basis with pictures clipped from The Evening American. The paper may be examined for this purpose at the office of publication.

SPECIAL CLUE.

Each day there will be printed a Special Clue that may help you to solve one of the problems that have already appeared or that are yet to be printed. On the fourth day of the contest, for example, there might be printed a Special Clue that would help in the solution of Number 16, or on the tenth day there might be printed a clue that would furnish exactly the information needed to solve No. 5.

Make a note of these Special Clues as they appear. If you cannot solve today's picture, do not give up! A Special Clue may come along that will refresh your memory.

In Problems Nos. 3, 11 and 19, it is sufficient to give only the name of the star; the name of the photoplay is not required.

This is a competition to test your skill and your knowledge of the best motion pictures. At the close of the contest you will be expected to send in, with your set of twenty pictures, a short letter why you like motion pictures.

The classified ads on the next to the last pages are a silent salesroom for anything you might need.

PLAN BETTER SMALL CARS

Plans for producing a bigger, roomier, easier riding car in the small car field are disclosed by Walter P. Chrysler, president of the corporation, in a statement just issued.

Unlimited possibilities are seen by Mr. Chrysler for an automobile that is larger, roomier and exceptionable durable.

Mr. Chrysler said: "The person who prefers to drive a small car is entitled to every consideration that can be given him. It is possible to build the qualities of comfort, roominess, easy riding and long life into a small car. The possibilities with such a car are so tremendous that it can actually be built in great quantities at remarkably low cost, if the manufacturer has the capacity and organization to do it."

NEW BALCRANK BUMPER WINS AUTOISTS' APPROVAL

A different type of bumper, offering better car protection and at the same time harmonizing with the many new models of cars, is found in the unique design of Balcrank bumpers. Introduced extensively on Auburn cars, they are now becoming popular on other cars.

Frank Moreas, general manager of the Power and Lester Company of New England distributors, characterized the Balcrank product as "distinctly different from the old methods of motor car protection."

WORK RESUMED AT WYANDOTTE MILL

Rochester, N. H., Aug. 18 – Work was resumed today at the Wyandotte Worsted Company's plant, which was shut down Monday, each fourteen of the employees of the finishing department, who were receiving about $18 per week and demanded $3 additional.

BRIGHTER BODY HUES FOR 1927

The feminine flair for color has produced the marked trend toward brighter hues in motor car bodies, according to Frank G. Brown, general manager of the Oakland Company of New England.

The modern girl, Mr. Brown declares, knows that there is as much freshness in the color of a new car as there is in a change in style. A new shade of blue has been known to spread from coast to coast in a few weeks.

Because colors are constantly gaining in importance as objects of the American eye, the sales executive declares, it will be unwise to predict how long the present vogue for colorful motor cars will last.

ADMIRAL MAY BAN NAVY YARD SMOKING

Curious smokers throwing away lighted cigars or cigarettes in dirigible hangars at the Chatham Naval Air Station might cause a serious fire, it has been learned, and the full extent of the ban on smoking in any part of the naval station and hangars at Arlington will be put into effect.

ABSORBERS ADD TO COMFORT

The owner of the moderate priced car can now enjoy the same comfort, pleasure and safety in riding over roads as those who possess the highest priced cars, according to George A. Crittenden, of the Lovejoy Manufacturing Company. Pitching, jouncing and rebounds have been eliminated by Lovejoy absorbers, according to Mr. Crittenden.

He says: "It is a source of constant satisfaction to us to know that while many makers of cars are using Lovejoys as standard equipment for individual owners are applying this type of absorbers and are using them on their own cars.

"We have just closed with Novascotia dealers an order for the largest individual order we have ever taken and are speedily making deliveries. The Novascotia Company is now in position to equip every Buick as well as those Lovejoys."

Found Dead on Wharf

A man believed to have been Thomas Hughes, an employee of the Federal Fruit Company, was found dead in the cabin of the fruit steamer Mayflower at Long Wharf at the foot of State street early today. Medical Examiner George H. Magrath was summoned to the wharf and in the police view the body was that of Hughes.

Why risk unpardonable perspiration odor?

You can avoid it this pleasant, safe way

WE ALL suffer from it, especially in summer, but unfortunately many do not realize how much they offend.

It's a terrific handicap when people don't want you to come too near them.

Millions have learned that a morning Lifebuoy bath is not only refreshing and stimulating but it actually renders perspiration odorless all day.

The healthful way

It is dangerous to prevent perspiration by stopping the pores. The Lifebuoy way is to cleanse pores so thoroughly and antiseptically that natural perspiration is without odor.

The wonderful, searching cleanliness has given greater value than the prevention of perspiration odor—it gently removes germs which spread disease and which constantly rest on the skin and thus enter the home. Lifebuoy is more than a delightful toilet soap—it is a very real and needed protection to the health of every member of the family.

If you are used to other soaps, the pungent, hygienic scent of Lifebuoy will surprise you just as its astonishing volume of lather and amazing cleansing power surprise. In fact, everything about Lifebuoy is different—its generous size, its orange-red color (the color of its pure, palm-fruit oils).

Its scent assures protection

But this healthful smell of Lifebuoy gives one such a sense of absolute, antiseptic cleanness, that you will quickly become fond of it. The scent rinses away completely—does not cling.

Costs no more

Even though you will say that Lifebuoy is the finest soap you ever used—the most cleansing and health-guarding—its cost is probably less than you pay for other soap.

Get Lifebuoy today—in a week it will have become a fixed habit.

DISPLAY NEW NASH CARS

An impressive introductory display of newly refined Advanced Six and Light Six models at all Nash showrooms throughout the country, marks the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Nash Motors Company.

The striking features of the new cars offer concrete evidence of the progress of the company since the day the first Nash car left the production lines a full decade ago.

Both from an engineering standpoint and with regard to the niceties of arrangement and appointment, these newly refined groups of Nash models exhibit the character of Nash manufacturing principles, C. P. Rockwell, New England distributor.

The advent of the new cars, according to Mr. Rockwell, presents an even more phenomenal picture for the Nash in the future than has been true of the past, although in the ten years that have elapsed since the first Nash was marketed the company has reached a position in the industry ranking fifth or sixth among all automobile manufacturers in the world. During the first month of this year, Nash sales reached a total of 7,513 cars, as compared to the total sales for the entire year of 1,658 of 64,121. The year of 1925 gained nearly 80 per cent over 1924.

Both series of cars now being presented to the public are powered by newly improved seven bearing crankshaft motors.

The Light Six four door sedan, which is the leader of the Light Six series presents a forward vision body with an increased amount of leg room.

HOW A BUDGET FOR $1,600 OPERATES

How to Succeed in Keeping Outgo in Bounds

Budget Talk No. 131
By MARTHA LEE

So many requests for budgets for a $1,600 income are received that I am going to devote today to telling you about another family of budgeters who are doing extremely well on this amount.

This family includes a father aged 36; a wife, 34, and children of 7, 5 and 3. They live in a nearby city. Father is an inspector of immigration, working ... It's a busy day with three weeks' vacation. Was obliged to leave school at 13 to help support the family and began as a newsboy at $6 a week.

Then he went with a railroad as brakeman and ... a machinist. He saved and studied and at 27 took the Civil Service examinations and came through with flying colors.

He has a great passion for reading and has collected some 500 books. His idea of a perfect day is to have to ask only ... to read and "Good evening" to the world at large and revel in his books the rest of the day.

His firm determination has always been to overcome his early handicaps and he has certainly succeeded to a large ... His wife came of plain people and has comparatively little education. She is an interesting character, however, in some she is working out a successful family life under many difficulties.

Does sudden illness in the family find you financially unprepared? Budget will build a reserve health fund.

She is a good housekeeper and cooperates with her husband in maintaining a high standard of health for the family. She subordinates all household expenses to her husband's great ambition for a large saving account with which to buy a farm. She is devoted to him and by taking the children out in the evening makes it possible for him to enjoy to the fullest extent his pleasure for reading.

The children are obedient and well-trained, but see too little of their father. A half hour's play with father after dinner is practically their only acquaintance with him.

There are no parties or entertainments of any kind in the home as the father thinks this is a useless expense, but there is an annual visit to the father's mother. About the only other home recreation is a ... occasional.

The one big ambition is for a farm and they see in a good way to achieve it. Then they are all going to live on it. The present plan is for one of the children to teach school and another to become a physician.

Credit should be given the father for the success he has achieved in spite of his early handicaps. Later he may realize how important a part his companionship is in the proper development of his children.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. R. V. writes that she would be very grateful if I could print a budget for her husband's salary of $35 a week. Her weekly expenses are rent $6 and $8 on an old bill, $2.50 for baby's milk, gas $1.50 a month, electricity $3 a month. The rest she spends on food, which saves nothing for clothing and saving.

I am afraid the leak in your finances is through the food bill. If as I assume, your family consists of self, husband and baby, your budget should line up savings $4, including insurance, shelter $7 with business carfares, food $10.50 including baby's milk, clothing $4.50, operating $4, personal $3. I am sending you a book of helpful suggestions for bringing up baby.

Miss D. Fay about to be married, asks for a budget for $55 for two in the family. Intends to rent a furnished apartment, as husband's business necessitates continual moving. For shelter, including your husband's business carfares, Thirteen dollars is allowed for food also the business lunches, $8; for operating, savings, $5.50. Including insurance, and personal, $11.50. You may want to borrow something from the personal fund to add to savings.

P. B. R. wants to establish a Budget for $725 a week. "They are buying their home on which they pay $58 a month, a part of which applies to the mortgage principal.

A Standard Budget will allow you for a family of three $35 for shelter including business carfares, taxes, repairs and fire insurance on the house and interest on the mortgage, $71.25 for food and business lunches $18.75 for clothing, $18.75 for operating, $22.50 for savings and payments against the principal of the mortgage and $18.75 for personal. Out of this comes the lodge dues you mention.

Mrs J. E. McC. has a house of 15 rooms, 10 of which she rents. The rent of these pay the interest on the mortgage, insurance, taxes, water rates and fire insurance on the house and interest on the mortgage, $71.25 for food and business lunches $18.75 for clothing, $18.75 for operating, $22.50 for savings and payments against the principal of the mortgage and $18.75 for personal. Out of this comes the lodge dues you mention.

Mrs J. E. McC. has a house of 15 rooms, 10 of which she rents. The rent of these pay the interest on the mortgage, insurance, taxes, water rates and Christmas club of $8 a week. Husband earns $30 a week, out of which she has to feed six and clothe four. Also pays out of this the carfare and laundry. Asks for economical recipes.

If you wish to budget your husband's salary of $30 a week, I would suggest savings $3 including life insurance, food $14.50 clothing $4, operating $4 and personal $2.50. However, if you will let me know the income from your 10 rooms, I will be glad to make a budget that will be better suited to your needs.

Back bills come out of personal. I'll hope to hear from you again. The recipe books have gone forward.

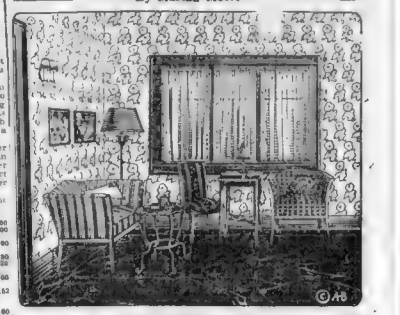
Mrs. C. of Everett asks for a Budget. Carfares and dinners $7.50 a week, rent $6.25, insurance, newspapers and movies $2 a week, gas bill about $2.50 a month. Would like to save but find it impossible. Two in the family. Do not have much milk except for puddings. Makes her own cooking, pies, etc.

You can easily go by a Standard Budget for $25 which will give you $2.50 for savings and insurance, $6 for shelter and business carfares, $10 for food, $2.50 for clothing, $3.50 for operating and $1 for personal out of which must come all amusements, newspapers, magazines and doctor's bills. You are paying more rent than the Standard Budget will allow and will have to borrow from your food budget to make up the difference. With $25 a week you can keep within these allotments and still have the comfort of a savings account.

Practical Hints on Spending by a Plan

Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore



THE guests who stay more than a day or two should be granted a certain amount of privacy. In the case of a husband and wife, especially, there are always some domestic problems to be discussed, financial or business transactions to be attended to, letters to be written, advice to be asked and given, opinions to be exchanged and each other's company to be enjoyed.

The average hostess, however, cannot provide a private sitting room for her guests, but she can, unless the guestroom is exceptionally small, create a living room quite favorable to the normal activities of her visitors.

The above picture proves that such a plan does not necessitate any unreasonable financial outlay. Set aside a simply curtained triple window and two groups have been arranged.

One is composed of a small table with lamp, blotter, writing material and a cigar box, a striped desk chair and another small but very comfortable chair. The other group is built around the willow tea seat.

A floor lamp, a wrought iron table with marble top, two pictures and a wall light fixture complete it adequately.

The sophisticated wall paper permits the use of plain furniture; the upholstery fabrics are colorful but inexpensive, and the arrangement especially effective in contrast with the large flower wall patterns.

It's always a good plan to use accessories but sparingly, as the guests usually have some of their own to scatter about, photographs and books mostly.

GREETINGS Everybody!

I wonder if you really appreciate the value of grape juice in the diet?

Fine making and ... sling of grape juice dates back five or six thousand years. Out of centuries of ancient product cannot be compared with the delicious beverage of today. The grape juice that we are familiar with and use for beverages, sauces, sauces and deserts is prepared from the very best of grapes. I understand that these are carefully washed with mechanical sprayers, dried between rolls and leaf, and in large kettles. Then the juice is piped to the filling rooms and then, presto, into sterilized bottles. The bottles are partially sealed and then headed to a temperature high enough to kill all fermentation.

Grape juice contains grape sugar, fat, grape sugar as well as valuable mineral matters. It is invaluable in invalid feeding as it appeals to the eye, the palate, and is most acceptable to even a delicate stomach. The mineral salts contained in it are excellent for children. The vitaminse and fruit sugar will help build up vigorous bodies.

Grape juice may be used to brighten our life in many ways, especially at breakfast when the appetite must be awakened. Just try this on the family tomorrow morning. Half fill a small glass with cracked ice, then fill with colorful, fragrant grape juice. Notice the effect of its tart, cold deliciousness, on those jaded Summer appetites. You will be interested to know that one of New York's most famous hotels serves grape juice in just this way, at 40c a serving.

Some hot night when it seems as though nothing in the world would tempt you to eat, try this. Blend 1 pint of grape juice with 2 pints of cold, cool thoroughly, and just before serving add 1 pint of sparkling ... or pale dry ginger ale.

Another delicious drink for dinner is made of a combination of grape juice and ginger ale. Chill well 1 pint of grape juice and two ... bottles of dry ginger ale. Party ... fill frapte glasses with the grape juice, then fill with the gin ger ale.

On hot Summer afternoons or evenings, when someone drops in unexpectedly, the following will be popular.

Sparkling Grape Juice—Half-fill tall, thin glasses with grape juice, add to each a spoonful of cracked ice and fill with sparkling water.

Grape Juice Punch—Add to 1 pint of grape juice the juice of 2 lemons and 1 orange. Dissolve in this 1 cup of sugar. Add 1 pint of water (sparkling if desired). If sparkling water is used, add it just before serving.

The ham should absorb nearly all the grape juice with the exception of a small quantity which, with the fat that gathers in the pan may be used in making the gravy. For piquancy add a tablespoon of vinegar to the gravy as it cooks.

Place in cold water and simmer until partially tender. Do not cook as long as for boiled ham as the finishing in the oven must be given some time.

For added flavor drop two or three pieces of stick cinnamon, half a dozen cloves, ½ dozen peppercorns and a piece of bay leaf into the kettle while the ham is simmering. Let the ham cool slightly in the water then drain and trim, removing the skin.

TARNISHED WINGS

by BEATRICE BURTON

Author of "GILDED KISSES" and "PIRATE OF HEARTS"

Story of a Boston Girl Who Liked Jazz Music and the Bright Lights

CHAPTER LV.

(Copyright, 1926, Johnson Features, Inc.)

MERRY put her bitter thoughts into words just as bitter. She held Bill Erskine's letter telling her of his marriage in Florida.

"I'll sue him," she said to Moms, lifting her head from her hands. "I'll sue him for breach of promise, if it's the last thing I ever do!"

For the moment there was no beauty in Merry's face.

"Don't you think that's what I ought to do? Sue him?" she asked her mother, and her voice was as hard as her white face.

"No, no," she answered. "How could you do such a thing? A breach of promise suit wouldn't hurt Bill Erskine's reputation. Such things don't injure a man. But with a girl it's different."

"I don't see why," Merry returned stubbornly. "And even if it did, I wouldn't care. I'm going to do it!"

Moms shrugged her wide shoulders.

"All right, Merry, suit yourself," she said stonily, "if you want to advertise the fact to the world that Bill Erskine wouldn't marry you, go ahead and do it. Only remember, you'll be hurting yourself more than anyone else."

"How would a suit like that hurt me?" she wondered.

Moms' mouth smiled, but her eyes did not.

"Why, Merry, can't you see for yourself that you'd be done for? Do you suppose any other man would marry a girl who'd been publicly jilted?" she asked, with a sharp glance. "This way, nobody knows whether you wouldn't marry Bill, or whether he wouldn't marry you. That is, nobody but me and Cassie knows it! And if we all keep perfectly still, and you go out with other people, as if nothing had happened, you can save your pride."

While Merry was thinking over what she said, she spoke again.

"And another thing, you'd look sweet filing this kind of suit against Bill Erskine when you're in danger of being dragged into Les Purcell's divorce case, wouldn't you?"

Merry's heart seemed to jump in her breast. She hadn't thought of that.

"What would you do if Nonie Purcell tried to make out that you and Bill had had trouble over her beautiful husband? What would you do then?" asked Moms, who always expected the very worst to happen.

There was wisdom in what she said, however, and Merry knew it.

"I wish to goodness I'd done what I wanted to do a month ago," she said weakly. "I wanted to write and tell him I was all through with him, and then I didn't."

"Well, why didn't you?" Her mother looked up again.

"Oh, I Don't Know Exactly," Merry Said in a Dull Voice

"Oh, I don't know, exactly," Merry said dully. "The house seems so awful these days, somehow. I know it was all right for you to marry again, Moms, only—this house isn't home, any more, to me. I'd have married Bill Erskine or anybody else to get out of it."

There was a breathless pause.

"Now, Merry, look here," Moms said sternly, "I've had just about enough from you girls, about my second marriage. I'm tired of the way you and Cassie and Jinny and even Lillie Dale treat Ed Heffinger! He's my husband and this is my house."

Merry did not wait to hear the rest of her tirade. She rushed up the stairs, vowing to herself that she would never spend another night under the roof of Moms' house.

Then she thought wildly of leaving town, too. Of going somewhere where no one would know her, or anything about her.

But all the time she was thinking about it, she knew she never would go.

It was not in her nature to dare and to adventure and to pioneer. She was a drifter. The way that was easiest, that was the way. And she knew it.

April of the next year found Merry Locke doing the same things that she had been doing the year before.

Lillie and she were still running the beauty shop.

They were still living under the roof of Moms' comfortable, gloomy house. Promising each other from week to week that they would get a little flat of their own in the near future where there would be no Mr Heffinger. But they never did it.

Merry had a new admirer.

His name was George Lest, and he worked in the wholesale house where Lillie bought some new equipment for the shop. That was how Merry happened to meet him.

He was, as Merry cheerfully said, nobody "to wave flags over." He was tall and thin and dark. Not the least bit good looking, and anything but a good dancer.

He had a little roadster and his idea of a wild time was to take Merry for dinner to some quiet restaurant and then to the movies afterward.

The chances are that Merry liked him because he was so utterly different from Bill Erskine.

She never thought about Bill, if she could help it. He had dealt such a blow to her vanity that she was still hurt and half-ashamed whenever anyone mentioned him.

On the first Monday afternoon in April Muriel Kaufman came breezing into the shop about four o'clock.

Merry looked up in surprise when she saw her opening the door. It was months since she had seen Muriel. She had not seen much of Cassie or Muriel or any of the people who knew about her and Bill Erskine, ever since his marriage. Purposely she had kept away from them.

"Hello, Mary Ann Locke," Muriel Greeted Her With Cheer

"Hello, Mary Ann Locke!" Muriel greeted her with airy cheerfulness. "How's tricks?"

"Fine," Merry came back at her just as cheerfully, giving her a smile which was just as dazzling as if she felt like smiling. "What brings you here to our lowly emporium?"

"I want a haircut," she said. "I'm going to meet Cubby at five."

At a quarter to five Muriel was marcelled and brilliantined.

"Hear the news about Bill Erskine's wife?" she asked Merry.

Merry shook her head.

"She had a baby about a month ago," Muriel told her. "I had a letter from her yesterday."

"I didn't know you knew her," Merry answered.

Muriel widened her big brown eyes. "Of course I knew her," she said. "Bill asked me to invite her to our house when he was staying with Cassie and Morley a year ago last Christmas. Don't you remember? When Cassie had that big Christmas party of hers!"

"I remember the party, but I don't remember the girl," Merry replied, "I didn't even know you had a house guest at that time."

Muriel colored. "That's right. You and I weren't very good friends last year, were we?" she asked, with a nervous little laugh, "but the girl was at Cassie's party. A little blond girl named Elsie Preston. I thought you met her.

It flashed across Merry's mind that there had been a little ash-blonde girl at Cassie's party that night. She remembered how she had come upon Bill sitting with her in a corner, and had taken him away from her.

"But Muriel, the girl I remember was a young thing. She couldn't have been as old as you and me," she said, and Muriel nodded.

"That was the girl. She wasn't as old as we are," she said. "She's only twenty now. Mother says her people must have been crazy to let her marry Bill. He's forty-five or so. But I think it was all right.

"I didn't know what to think when your mother announced your engagement to Bill," she went on, "because I had known for months that Bill was going to marry Elsie Preston, if he got the chance."

"You knew that, and you didn't tell me about it!" Merry cried, her eyes dark and sparkling with sudden anger. "You knew I was engaged to Bill, and yet you invited that girl to your house! Well, you're a fine friend!"

Muriel laughed, showing sharp little white teeth. "You're a fine one, yourself," she said. "You knew I was engaged to Cubby, but that didn't stop you from trying to vamp him every chance you got, did it? Honey, don't think I didn't know that you used to make dates with him, because I did! 'All's fair in love and war,' and I made up my mind to get even with you! I'm sorry now, rather."

With that she got up and walked slowly and insolently out.

At six o'clock when Merry left the shop she was nowhere in sight. But at the corner of Berkeley street, Cubby Marsh was sitting in his car, plainly waiting for someone.

"Sean Muriel?" he sang out, as Merry came along the pavement. "I was to meet her here, but I'm a bit late."

Merry's lips went up in a smile, that dimpled one of her soft cheeks.

"Haven't laid eyes on her!" Merry replied blithely. If Muriel thought that all was fair in love and war, why not take her at her word?

She opened the door of the roadster and got in.

"I was just starting to walk home, Cubby," she said, smiling up at him entrancingly, "but I'd rather drive—with you. I don't even care when I get home! You could ask me to dinner and I'd be thrilled to pieces!"

Cubby grinned and turned his car. "I'd be thrilled, myself," he answered. "I was going out with Muriel, but as long as she's failed me—where do we go from here?"

He stopped the car suddenly and said something under his breath.

Muriel Kaufman was coming down the street toward them.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

AS I pass down the path of year
On year along whose borders grow such dreams and deeds as flowerlike, lend life cheer and all of joy men know, a hope springs up within me a desire no changes can dispel, it is a torch that burns with steadfast fire, a flame no waters quell. May I be a partner from these dreams and deeds along the years' bright way enough of sweetness for my spirit's needs when youth be passed away! May I but gather memories as I pass as children gather flowers, and may these blossoms, picked from Summer's ease, cheer Winter's dreary hours!
May not one fragrance of these glowing days be by Time's winds dispelled but may loved memories of glad years' ways be ever clasped and held!

Disturbers of Your Peace

Drawn By Dorothy Flack

FIRST comes the exquisite blonde with her eyes of blue and hair like spun gold Way back in the Fifth Century when her Nordic forebears left their own land and found their way into the country that is now Britain, Little Blonde Angel was right there with her pixelve charm.

And for the blonde man there is the striking brunette—perhaps startling would be a better word No passive beauty for her. Colorful, forceful and full of the love of life is Miss Brunette

Now behold the Merry Widow. "It ain't the way she looks It ain't the way she talks. It ain't the way she cooks—it's just her WAY." Of all the Disturbers in this group of feminine loveliness, the pretty widow is perhaps the most disturbing For she knows men as no girl ever knows them

And the Temperamental Lady, with her moments of ecstacy and high glee; her hours of radiant joyousness; her days of painful boredom and her nights of utter despair. Her laughter, her tears, her intense love and her rages—all these combine to make her disturbing and appealing.

And then comes the Lady of the Theatre playing the role of Disturber. In reality she is living and loving and working and playing just like other folks.—DOROTHY FLACK.

the balustrade. His grip was twisting steel, he took the bit of metal from her hand with masterful dexterity, unlocked the door and, while he barred her way with one arm, he pushed the knob and stepped into the living room.

James Kelvin stood in the centre of the room one hand still holding a book which, apparently, he had been reading when he was first startled by the voices outside

If courage in itself be a virtue it may be said to his credit that his face betrayed nothing of fear. At the centre of his forehead his brows were drawn close together in a black scowling pool, his dark eyes were burning alive.

Joslyn, following Brierhalter, came in and closed the door

"Jim . . . I couldn't help this . . . I didn't betray you . . ."

His eyes did not leave Brierhalter's face but his words were for Joslyn. "That's all right, Dear. I heard what was said."

Brierhalter, motionless, returned the steady gaze unflinchingly.

"I'm glad you heard," he said. "You know where I stand. What are you going to do about it?"

His voice was as cool as though he were addressing a business enemy across a conference table. In his very tone was the subtle inflection of satisfaction that comes from the superior position

"I don't know what you mean," Kelvin, for all his strained nerves, was able to maintain a large degree of his professional, his theatrical sureness.

"It happens," Brierhalter stated, "that I recognize you, Jim Kelvin. The mystery of your successful out of me you want," Brierhalter said quietly. "I don't waste any time coming to a decision. You give up the woman and get out. I'll guarantee to keep mum, to give you a chance to make your getaway. Otherwise—when I leave this room—"

Kelvin's face darkened as the sky darkens before an electrical storm.

"How do you know," he demanded acutely, "that I'll let you leave this room—alive?"

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I HAVE a "boy friend" who is not living in town at present. It would be proper for him, or rather his parents, to invite me to their home for a few weeks, would it not? No, we are not engaged. He is almost twenty and I am nineteen.

2. If it is proper for me to accept this invitation is he to pay my railroad fare?

3. If a girl invites a young man he pays his own fare, does he not?

4. When sitting at a table does the gentleman sit to the girl's right or left? When sitting on a lounge or each sitting on separate chairs near each other, where does the gentleman sit—left or right?

"WANT TO DO RA. T"

Answer:

IT is correct for the mother of the young man to invite you to their home. Such friendly hospitality is correct whether or not you are engaged.

2. No. The railway fare has nothing to do with the visit and the girl should pay her own fare if she comes alone.

3. Yes.

4 The rule of etiquette is "the lady on the right of the gentleman." Although this is by no means always maintained it is well for gentlemen to remember this.

Ways of a Husband

Anne Lisle's Fine Serial

By ANNE LISLE

"It's a rifle," he said. "You on guard here. You can't pass."

"But I've got to," I cried. "My husband"

"He's gone with the gang," Tommy said

"The mob took him?" I questioned.

"Yes'm," answered the boy.

"Where have they gone" I gasped.

"Over towards old Doc Wilks' place"

"I've got to go."

"You can't."

"I can. I will You shan't stop me. I've got my car. I'm going to save my husband."

"He went to save that fool of a Lingard," said Tommy vindictively. "It it he can't do it. Mister Jim use to be clever at the book. But he ain't stop em -and fust thing you know he won't want to. He'll take a hand when they find Lingard. He'll help 'em ta, and feather Lingard!"

Lingard" I repeated

No room for pity in my heart then. All I could feel was a vast relief and a burning shame—for in this moment I asked myself what terrible thing I had thought of Jim —and whether I could ever again creep into his arms knowing what had been in my heart during the terrible hour that was past.

"It was real. But could it ever be forgotten"

After a moment or two I roused myself to action. I was in a dull lethargy of remorse and regret. I couldn't stop and sit with myself as to whether or not I had really been suspecting Jim of something that would give a mob the desire to punish him. I wanted to forget the nightmare I had just been through.

But something must be done about Bertie Lingard I couldn't let little Tommy Haley with his absurd shot gun keep me imprisoned as the queen of the Bircher while a mob swept Jim along toward Dr. Willis' cottage and some hysterical dealing with Bertie Lingard who was an alien—and in the eyes of the natives—an Infidelle.

"You never were very fond of Bertie Lingard—were you, Tommy?" I inquired coldly.

"What makes you say that?"

"Well, you load your job driving Dr. Willis around when Bertie went to live with him You didn't like that, did you?"

MEDBURY SAYS—

THIS is the time of the year when hundreds of small towns are holding bazaars and pretty girls are selling their kisses for charity. Beautiful women get as high as $5 a smack while homely dames have to let them go at two for a quarter.

AT these prices it isn't worth the wear and tear on their lips.

ONE fellow went up to a pretty girl and tried to open an account with her.

HE wanted to purchase a kiss provided he could buy it on deferred payments.

HE was looking for a good time on the installment plan.

BUT a pretty girl can't afford to run a credit department.

SHE has to sell her merchandise C. O. D.

KISSES are a dollar and hugs are twenty-five cents extra.

ONE man wanted to buy his smacks now and take delivery later on.

HE figured he could use the kisses better in September when his wife was away.

THOSE girls have to be careful. One fellow who didn't have any money ran up a bill of ninety-seven dollars.

HE kissed her so much that when it was all over he had to go into bankruptcy.

HE made a practice of going around bazaars and stealing kisses. Lots of girls hid to put burglar alarms on their lips.

ONE woman even had a stop-light installed on her chin.

ONE man was smart. He always took a piece of mistletoe with him and got his kisses for nothing.

A TIGHTWAD went up to one of the dames and asked her for a pass.

CHARITY bazaars are all right, but why should a man pay a dollar to some stranger when he can go home and kiss his wife all evening free of charge.

DAILY SHORT STORY

KEEPING COMPANY

By Virginia Howland

"LOOK, mother, how Katy's moping all round the place." The high sweet voice shrilled into the kitchen quiet.

"Katy," she said.

"Yes, mother." The dark, slender girl looking out of the window, spoke listlessly.

"Katy, why don't you go for a walk? You're staying too close at home."

"Oh, I don't know."

"Well, if you don't want to be walking, why don't you run down stairs and see Mrs. Murphy?"

"Aw, Katy," her sister said. "Before I'd moon for a fella like Jim!"

Flint struck flint. Katy wheeled about. "You're a fine one to talk, Stella," she cried. "And you knowing more about Jim than anybody else!"

Two tears that had been lingering began to roll down her cheeks. She brushed them aside and ran from the room.

Mrs. Brady turned to her daughter. "What does she mean, Stella?"

"Nothing" she drawled. "I can't help it if Jim Milner likes me best, and takes me out, ca-. 17" Stella stopped quoted in the strange thing! She gasped when her mother's voice. "Oh, Stella, and them keeping company"

"Keeping company, maybe," Stella rejoined defiantly. "But not engaged. Gee, Gee, I won't go with anybody less than a—engaged."

The slam of the front door slammed after Katy. She walked blindly down the street, walked on and on. It wasn't fair indeed it wasn't, she thought. Stella had come home with her hair face and disposition of Jim to her heighthy list of faults.

Katy soon reached the shopping district. The bobbin display caught her eye and she stopped to gaze into show windows.

By the time she turned toward home again her misery had lessened. She was surprised to find herself admiring the broad shoulders and splendid height of the young man walking just ahead of her. He carried a heavy suitcase in his hand.

"If I only had a fella like that," she thought "—and none Jim!"

The man turned his head at the sound of her passing heels. Blue eyes looked into brown eyes. Katy caught a glimpse of dark brown, a cleft chin—then a girl who had been keeping company with a white coat, with another man. Katy's heart did a turned into the building where she lived.

She was close behind, and as she came up the stairs her way was barred on the landing. Mrs. Murphy with her arms about the young man's neck, cried: "Oh, Danny, Danny dear, it's grand to be seeing you again."

"Katy darling, look who's here. My own nephew, Danny! Isn't he fine?" the old lady exclaimed.

"Danny, this is my dear little friend, Katy Brady who lives upstairs. I want you two to be friends."

There was nothing slow about Danny. "Auntie," he said, "Why don't you ask Miss Brady to come in and have a drop of tea with us now?"

In Mrs. Murphy's warm little kitchen there was nothing shy or reserved about Danny. He was jolly and big and wholesome! Katy felt a pang as she looked at him and thought how handsome he was! Time sped quickly. Now she was promising to go with Danny to the movies that very night, and to a dance with him Saturday!

The door opened and a shrill sweet voice, all too familiar, called out. "May I come in, Mrs. Murphy?"

Stella's hunting instinct had been quivering as usual. There she was, all sparkle with her hair bobbed and snappy regardless Mrs. Murphy's face crinkled into a welcoming smile. She liked the Brady girls.

"Come in, child. We're having a dish of tea and there's a drop left."

Stella's mouth opened a little and closed tight again when she saw Danny, watching her sister. Katy's heart sank into her boots, down, down! Stella was so pretty that Katy had a mental picture of Danny following in Jim's footsteps.

Stella said casually, "Jim called up a little while ago. Said would I go to the movies with him tonight, and I said I'd ask you would you mind."

"Of course I don't mind," Katy answered frigidly.

Stella turned to Danny.

"Isn't it terrible to be jealous?" she asked lightly. "Jim's Katy's fella. They've been keeping company a long time. If he just asks me any place she's mad."

A cloud came over Danny's face. He looked sharply at Katy.

"Maybe we did keep company for a while, but it's over this long time," Katy defended. "He's no fella of mine. You can keep him, Stella."

Realizing that she had not said at all what she wanted to say, Katy added hastily, "Mrs. Murphy, I must be going now. I've had a lovely time, and I'm awfully glad to have met you, Mr. Murphy." Her exit was hurried. She heard Stella's taunting giggle following her.

Danny came, sure enough, that evening. One more Katy's heart began its troubled flutter. She took more pains to be witty and pretty than before, and hinted that, if urged, she might go to the movies with Danny herself. Dan managed a quick getaway with Katy.

The picture was banality supreme, but Katy sitting in the warm darkness close by the boy thought she must be just waking to life's promise.

They loitered on the way home. "You know," Katy said timidly, "I thought you wouldn't come tonight."

"Why?"

"Well, Stella's so pretty I thought maybe you'd take her instead. The fellas always fall for Stella!"

"Katy." She thrilled at his use of her name "I'm not saying your sister isn't a cute kid—she's all that and then some, but she's just like all the other cute kids in the world. You well, I've always been too busy to know many girls, but you're different from the others. You're quiet like. Yep. Anyway, it was you I wanted."

It's glance seemed a caress, promissory of the future. Katy walked on with every nerve atingle.

When they reached home there were Mr. and Mrs. Brady, and Mr. and Mrs. Murphy and Stella and Jim, all foraging for a bite to eat. Jim looked curiously at Katy. The flush in her cheeks, the sparkle in her eyes were new to him. Now he realized Katy's charm as he never had before.

He edged toward her. "Katy," he began awkwardly, ignoring Stella's glance. "what about Christy's dance Saturday night?"

Katy's eyes sought Danny's. They smiled at each other.

"Thanks," she said. "Can't make it—I got a date."

FADS AND FANCIES

Cool and Coolic coats of brightly colored silk. Embroidered in grotesque Chinese emblems, these gaunt wraps are smart for either daytime or evening wear during the Summer season. Lined in vividly contrasting shades, these models are charmingly exotic, lending an old-world air of romance to their girlish wearers. They are distinctly designed for slender, youthful types.

Weatherwise and Otherwise stunning is the latest novelty in a hand-painted crepe georgette scarf that depicts a country scene with large windmills in the foreground. On a white ground, the design was outlined in red and black, while a refreshing suggestion of green foliage added to the refreshingly rural aspect.

Bearing the Yoke of advance Fall fashions, both coats and tailored dresses show yokes that emphasize the importance of the dropped shoulder effect, which promises to be one of the outstanding features of autumnal styles.

Cunning Coatees reaching just to the hips, are being worn in Paris, and are predicted as a late Summer style on this side of the ocean. Of novelty, embroidered fabric, such a coatee has one button at the bottom and is most effective when worn over a jabot frock, so that the frill can be used on the outside of the jacket.

A Clever Deception is practiced by the resourceful way of simulating lace-trimmed or embroidered hosiery. Colored lace, or embroidery, medallions attached to bands of the same are made so as to be easily adjustable on the leg, just below the knee, and on the foot, just below the instep. Over these are drawn pale chiffon hose, and the effect of most elaborate and expensive imported hosiery is obtained.

THE WISE SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By Helen Rowland

HOLA, hola, hola, my Daughters! Lift up thy voice and rejoice!

For, behold, the Purveyor of Beauty, and the Glorifier of the American girl hath spoken! Yea, he hath sent forth an edict, declaring that all the damsels of his chorus shall be recruited from among the co-eds and high-brows and college maidens!

He hath given his word that, in the chorus of 1927, beauties of the mind shall be chosen before beauties of the flesh, and that INTELLECT shall exceed curling locks and curving calves!

Go to. What then, shall it avail a damsel though she hath two good legs, if she is likewise addicted to two negatives? What will a pair of dimples avail her, if she have not two brain-cells to match them?

What shall it profit her, though her hair be of spun-gold, if there be nothing BENEATH it wherewith to charm the mind, and uplift the subliminal consciousness of the Tired Business Man?

Alas, not a jot or tittle! For, the Stage Door Johnnie shall agree her, and her middle name shall be "Out"!

Yea, the Stage Door Johnnie shall delight to invite his intellectual "Cutie" to the lectures on Mesopotamia, and shall regale her, not upon lobster and terrapin, but with feasts of reason.

The night clubs and the winebibbers shall know the chorus girl no more; for she shall turn her back upon them. And all her spare moments shall be spent in the Metropolitan Museum, in search of culture and inspiration.

And, when a millionaire seeketh to lure her forth to the Roadside Tavern, she shall not say, "Yes, Daddy"!; but shall reprove him saying:

"Nay, nay! Let us invite our souls in the Public Library. Let us uplift our spirits with reading 'The Story of Philosophy!' Let us have a wild time discussing Emerson and Plato, over a glass of buttermilk!"

"Let us drink deep of Aristotle and Spinoza and feed our souls upon Einstein and the theory of Relativity!"

"For, though I may roll my hose and my cigarettes, I am a sweet, refined College Girl!"

And the Tired Business Man will be thrilled beyond measure!

For, verily, verily, since all debutantes array themselves as show girls, and all flappers carmine their lips and peel to masculine chortles, an INTELLECTUAL damsel will be something NEW under the sun!

And, a Chorus Lady MUST be different! For it is better to be dead than undistinguished!

SELAH.

FAMOUS MOTHERS

VERY little is known of the home life or parentage of that keen satirist, William Makepeace Thackeray. But to those who have read his powerful novels any information about his environment is of interest.

According to records now extant Thackeray's mother was young Anne Becher, who was nineteen when he was born. A few years after this her husband died and she married Major Carmichael Smyth. Of her physical appearance Anthony Trollope says, "She was a handsome, spare, gray-haired lady, whom Thackeray treated with a courtly deference as well as constant affection."

What influence Mrs. Smyth had on her talented son is not known. But there were religious differences between them. She insisted upon observance of the evangelical section of the church, while he opposed this. And while there were many discussions on the subject there were few quarrels and no important rift.

When his mother remarried Thackeray became a good friend of Major Smyth and invited both Mrs. Smyth and her husband to live with him. Although this offer was not accepted Thackeray visited with his mother frequently despite occasional differences, was very fond of her.

MIDDLE AGE BRINGS NEW INTERESTS

For Women in Good Health

MRS. HARVEY TUCKER
409 WALKER STREET, SHELBYVILLE, IND.

"Grow old along with me, The best is yet to be"

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she neglected before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women of middle age, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Those who have learned through their own experience the merit of this dependable medicine are enthusiastic in recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

"I had been in bad condition for three months. I could not do my work. One day I read what your medicine had done and just had a feeling that it would help me, so I sent and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had only taken half a bottle when I got up and started to do my work. It gave me an appetite, and helped me wonderfully. I can not praise this medicine highly enough. I surely will advise all women and girls to take it, and they don't have to use rouge to look healthy. My two daughters are taking it now and one is also using the Sanative Wash. I am willing to have you use this testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. Harvey Tucker, 409 Walker St., Shelbyville, Indiana.

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. Jennie Bollzman, 516 Smith St., West Hoboken, N. J.

Notice the Short Man

He Does the Thinking, and That's More Important Than Muscle

This is a picture that young men whose minds are on prize fighting, horse racing, baseball, etc., might think about for a minute or two.

And that, by the way, is a long time to think. Not more than one man in ten thousand can actually concentrate his mind on one subject for as much as sixty seconds without letting his mind wander.

This is printed to call attention to the fact that Tex Rickard, the fight promoter, who in the long run gets the money, and who doesn't get any of the uppercuts, "short jabs," left or right hand "swings," does get what he wants and never loses HIS championship, that of CHAMPION PROMOTER.

It is nice to be tall and muscular like Tunney or Dempsey, and POWERFUL. It is pleasant to have foolish people admire you intensely.

But it is a good deal BETTER to be able to think. Thinking is a power that LASTS; it gets you something better than a prize fight championship title.

Tex Rickard has handled the "big men" one after the other, and has seen them vanish into the grave of oblivion, one after the other. He goes right on. He will see Tunney and Dempsey "get too old" or too stale for the fighting game. If Tunney wins this time Rickard will see Dempsey lose his title. Later, he will see Tunney lose HIS title. He, Rickard, will NOT lose his title.

The only worthwhile championship comes from using your brain.

So, young people, USE IT.

A Pertinent Question

Who Will Care to Doubt Right of the People to Be Heard?

That able and courageous Republican, Representative Ogden L. Mills, in a powerful defense of the New York referendum on Volsteadism, challengingly asks:

"What friend of democratic institutions will care to question the right of the people to be heard?"

The answer, of course, is that no friend of democratic institutions will question it.

But under this standard Mr. Mills' own party must be classed as a persistent enemy of democratic institutions.

For it has not only opposed every attempt to make the referendum, along with its companion safeguards, the initiative and recall, a permanent part of the political institutions of New York State, but has deprived the people of another right to be heard—namely, the State-wide direct primary.

Indeed it is now engaged in a number of States in a concerted drive to restore that notorious device of plutocratic control, the convention system of nominations, which gives to the people only a choice between two machine set-ups.

We wish that this new Republican enthusiasm for giving the people the right to be heard on the troublesome liquor question might extend over a wider area.

"The Machine Mind"

For Those Who Desire to Think, More Material Is Available

A recent speaker berated science for its part in creating the "machine mind" of the present age by facilitating the spread of "standardized ideas." He contended that:

"Incessant bombardment of standardized newspapers, magazines, books, movie plays, is causing people not only to use the same slang, sing the same melodies and wear the same clothes, but even to feel the same emotions and think the same thoughts."

Man is an imitative animal. Few humans ever do much individual thinking.

The difference between today and yesterday is that widely circulated printed matter has replaced the squire, the parson and the boss.

More ideas are broadcast. Outlooks are wider, less provincial, whether more thinking is done or not. For those who desire to think more material is available.

If That Court Catches Us--

Heaven Help the U. S. A.

Bulgarian irregular troops made a dash over the Jugo-Slav border, killed a few Jugo-Slavs, and the fighting lasted all night. The Bulgarian Government was supposed to encourage the raid, and such an "incident" might develop into war. If it did, the World Court would take it up, and want to decide for us what WE ought to do about it. The least expected would be that we should PAY when the gentlemen got through cutting each other's throats.

You will be told by World Court advocates "no such thing would come before the World Court."

Wait and SEE if Uncle Sam is foolish enough to get into it.

RAPID GROWTH OF MOVIE INDUSTRY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

It is difficult for us to realize the rapid growth of the movie industry.

A generation ago the business did not exist. Now it runs into the millions.

If anyone were to say that an enterprise now not in existence and not even thought of will control a billion dollars in forty years, we should think he was drawing on his imagination. Yet look at the recent figures about the movies.

It is estimated that there will be spent in Southern California this season approximately $102,800,000 for new productions. This is an increase of almost 20 per cent. over last year. It means the filming of over 300 feature pictures, which is about 85 per cent. of the total produced in the entire country.

More attention is being paid nowadays to the better quality of pictures.

The kind of pictures and the amount made are no more determined by the actors, but all that is arranged by shrewd business men.

WHEN YOU DO TOO MUCH FOR THE OTHER FELLOW

You have spent much time in your life boosting others and doing little toward selling yourself. Now you find you have little to show for your efforts, and those whom you have helped are not inclined to boost you.

Many of these same persons look upon you as a poor sample of success, and perhaps believe you incapable of doing more than you have accomplished for yourself; in fact, they believe that if you had ability you would be higher.

They hesitate to recommend you because they think you would not make good if they did.

Yet those same persons received their start through your good offices.

You put them on the track of success and stood up for them when other persons doubted their qualities for success.

If you have learned your lesson, perhaps you will take to looking after your own interests, giving less time to helping others.

It is fine to have the spirit that would recommend another for a job that you might have had yourself.

Your altruistic attitude has made others think you a fixture in the place you now occupy; so those seeking employes have not considered you available.

Better let people know that you are seeking a chance to better your position.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Mrs. Simmons can't keep a house-maid.

She pays them good wages, provides a restful, sunny bedroom and gives them a whole day off each week. Yet after a few weeks they grab their vanity cases and flit.

Why?

"I'll tell you why," says Molly, who worked for Mrs. Simmons exactly ten days. "She treats you as if you were an idiot. I worked out for ten years before I went to her place and I had wonderful references.

"I'm not like these girls who do just as little as they can and leave the corners dirty. I like housework and I've got a system for doing it. I take an interest in my work just as if I was doing it in my own home and I always get along until I went to her.

"But from the very first day I saw we weren't going to get along together.

"She never can leave you alone. She isn't satisfied to have you do a thing in your own way. You've got to do it HER WAY, and she keeps nagging and fussing until you do.

"For instance, she likes sponge cake made just one way. I had an awful good recipe for hot water sponge cake that I've used for years. Everybody else was crazy about it.

"But it wasn't her recipe so she wouldn't have it. And cleaning floors—she wanted them cleaned a certain way with a certain kind of cleanser.

"I always have been proud of the way I kept my floors and she admired them too until she found that they weren't done the way she liked to have them done. Then she couldn't rest until I did it her way.

"It takes the heart out of you to be bossed that way. You might just as well be a machine. So I quit. She was awful sore when I told her why.

"She said it was HER house and she guessed she had a right to have a thing done in a certain way if she wished. I told her it might be HER house but it was MY work, as long as I was doing it, and she didn't have any business to interfere as long as I did it right.

"But she couldn't see it. You never can teach women like that anything. I bet girls keep on quitting her as long as she lives."

They keep quitting on Mr. Simmons too—both girls and men. Mr. Simmons is in the wholesale clothing business. He has a big office force. He, too, is willing to pay good wages.

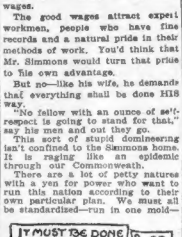
The good wages attract expert workmen, people who have fine records and a natural pride in their methods of work. You'd think that Mr. Simmons would turn that prize to his own advantage.

But no—like his wife, he demands that everything shall be done HIS way.

"No fellow with an ounce of self-respect is going to stand for that," say his men and out they go.

This sort of stupid domineering isn't confined to the Simmons home. It is raging like an epidemic through our Commonwealth.

There are a lot of petty natures with a yen for power who want to run this nation according to their own particular plan. We must all be standardized—run in one mold—regardless of our individual pride or capacity.



Quite often it is a good plan and an admirable mold and the various Simmoneses who back it cannot see why we won't all accept it with enthusiasm.

They overlook the vital plan unless a man can put a part of his own soul into it.

A man must work for himself as well as for the other fellow, if his own work is to amount to anything.

He must build for his own pride, as well as for the other fellow's profit.

That's why standardization and conformity hit at the very root of good workmanship—at the very root of life itself.

For personal pride is the sap which makes us grow. Bleed us of that and the spirit dies.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "DEVOUT AND DEVOTED LOVERS"

SOME WOMEN say that
AN EMOTIONAL MAN Is NEVER a DEVOTED LOVER.
Maybe not. But he Is usually A DEVOUT
; OVER.
While HE LASTS.
And, it seems, many women
Prefer the devout man
To the DEVOTED, for
They are INFINITELY more SPECTACULAR.
A DEVOUT LOVER IS LIKE A SKY-ROCKET,
He is always GOING
UP in the air, and Demanding that THE WOMAN go
WITH HIM. He is always MAKING SPARKS, and
SHOWERS of lovely words,
But USUALLY they all
FALL to the ground,
For MOST devout lovers
Are SELFISH MEN.
A DEVOUT lover visualizes
A WOMAN in HIS ARMS.
A DEVOTED ONE visualizes
Her in HIS LIFE.
This is kinder; for LIFE
Happens to BE LONGER Than ANY MAN'S ARMS.

Dogs and Men

The fidelity of a dog is proverbial.

The reciprocal affection of the master might as well be taken as a subject for moralizing.

Three recent news items bespeak this side of the relationship.

In Passaic, New Jersey, two girls chose to go to jail to save their dogs from being shot by officers of the law.

A petition was recently presented to the Board of Supervisors at Huntington, Long Island, signed by dog lovers. It asked that a public burying ground be made where the bodies of faithful dogs might be buried.

And in an election in New Jersey more interest was shown in a measure affecting dogs than in the question of who should be elected to Congress.

HOW IMPORTANT IS MAN IN GEOLOGY?

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

Professor E. W. Berry of Johns Hopkins University considers that "the magnitude and multiferous effects of human activity" on this planet "are scarcely of geologic magnitude."

He is able, he says, to conceive of many past events as being of much greater importance than the advent of man.

"It might be conceivable," he adds, "that the first mammal or the first flowering plant (Angio-sperm) was of more of an event than the first man."

Professor Berry is talking of the suitability of the term "psychozoic," often used to describe the present era of the history of the earth in order to distinguish it from the earlier periods. Mental activity came upon the earth with man.

"There can be no objection," he says, "to speaking of the present as the Age of Man—or Woman for that matter—but this is quite a different thing from setting up Psychozoic as a formal era.

No Qualifications

"For this the term possesses no qualifications, either with respect to the time involved, the sediments deposited or the distinctness of the lower boundary—either stratigraphic, faunal or floral."

If such a thing were possible, one might think that Professor Berry looks with a certain contempt upon man, at least geologically considered.

He is able to view man "with a certain degree of detachment," and thus viewed, he finds that "man becomes impressive as one of a gang.

"The necessity for these weakest of mammals, among their contemporaries of the Old Stone Age, to hunt in packs, was doubtless the inception of that nationalistic impuse of which we see such strong ferudescence at the present time."

It seems somewhat remarkable that "this weakest of mammals," subdued and survived the others. The "nationalistic impulse" upon which Professor Berry, following a recent fashion of the "intellectuals," bestows a passing kick, may not have deposited any geological sediments.

But if, as seems to have been the case, it served to develop and perpetuate the superiority of the human stock over its brute contemporaries of Pleistocene times, it has won a high place for itself in the earth's history.

The objection that Professor Berry makes to the term "Psychozoic Era" on purely geological grounds calls for no adverse comment. It is, of course, perfectly true that the advent of man on the earth has not produced a geologic revolution. He is physically a very insignificant creature, and his mightiest works are not even visible from the nearby moon.

By Brain Power

But, by virtue of his brain power he has overrun the earth, bored ways for himself through its mountains, mastered the stormy seas with his ships; enabled himself to fly in its atmosphere; subdued its energies to his use; turned its deserts into fruitful plains.

He has multiplied and modified its vegetable products; tamed, domesticated and reformed the character of many of his animal contemporaries; brightened and enlivened millions of square miles of its surface by his presence and his activities; filled it with ornaments from his hands that appeal to the sense of beauty and order.

By the power of his mind he has reached out beyond the worlds, and ventured with undaunted imagination among the countless suns of the galaxy, classifying them by their ages and by their chemical and physical constitution, which have been made known to him by the marvelous power of his own thoughts.

Considered in the light of these facts, does not the advent of man appear the greatest event in the world's history? Surely his shadow falls beyond the Angiosperm, and beyond all stratigraphic, faunal or floral things and events.
